GARY ADMITS STEEL CONTROL

Subsidiaries Dominated by the Trust, He Testifies at House Inquiry.

DENIES WORLD PRICE FIXING

Promises All the Facts Relating to the Plans of Steel and Iron Institute.

UNDER FIRE FOR SIX YEARS

Has Already Spent Hundreds of Thousands of Dollars to Aid Federal Investigation.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 1.—The Steel Investigation Committee of the House met again to-day and heard for two hours E. H. Gary, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the United States Steel Corporation. Unlike the examination of John W. Gates last week, there were system and purpose sharply outlined in the questions put to the witness, and while it may quite truthfully be said that nothing now was developed, many important statements were for the first time officially testified to by a principal in the United States Steel Corporation, and members of the committee and evidently the Steel Trust magnates present regarded the hearing as having profound importance in the investigation.

There were present with Judge Gary his assistant, W. J. Filbert, who had prepared statements of all matters of capitalization and organization, and Richard V. Lindabury of Elizabeth, N. J., who appeared as his counsel. There was also present W. B. Dickson, former Vice President of the United States Steel Corporation; Percival Roberts, a Director of the corporation; Norman B. Ream, also a Director, and James Gayley, a former Vice President of the corporation.

Mr. Gary was frank in the extreme. He declared he would furnish to the committee all the facts and figures that the committee wanted concerning the affairs of the United States Steel Corporation and its subsidiary companies.

"All that you need to do is to request what you want," he said, "and we will furnish it. We will stand or fall on our record."

While admitting that the United States Steel Corporation absolutely dominates its subsidiary companies, Mr. Gary denied that the corporation is planning to form a trust to control steel products and prices of the entire world. This came in reference to a question about the American Iron and Steel Institute, of which Mr. Gary is President, and to which most of the important steel men belong.

As to Federal Inquiry.

The examination of Mr. Gary brought out the fact that the Department of Commerce and Labor and its Bureau of Corporations are not co-operating with the Stanley committee. Mr. Stanley asked the witness if he knew whether a report of the Bureau of Corporations on its investigation of the Steel Corporation had ever been submitted to President Taft or former President Roosevelt. Mr. Gary said he did not. It is this report which the committee has been endeavoring to get from Secretary Nagel, with the consent of the President.

Mr. Gary declared that the bureau had been investigating the Steel Corporation for five or six years.

"The Government's investigation through that source has been most thorough and exhaustive," he said. "The Bureau of Corporations must have a house full of facts. It has cost the Steel Corporation hundreds of thousands of dollars to comply with the requests of that Bureau for information and statistics."

Mr. Gary's examination will be continued to-morrow, when the committee will seek to learn from him further facts relating to the taking over by the Steel Corporation of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company. To-day Mr. Gary surprised the committee with the statement that the Tennessee Company before its absorption, while nominally "independent of all other companies," was "very dependent so far as getting a livelihood was concerned," a remark which he quickly asked to have expunged from the record, and which he said he had "no business to make."

This remark, however, served to forecast the probability that Mr. Gary to-morrow might make statements not in accord with the testimony given by John W. Gates as to the highly prosperous condition of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company at the time of the "forced sale" to the Steel Corporation. Mr. Gary told the committee that the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company still owes the Steel Corporation $10,167,700 for money advanced.

Line of Questioning.

Mr. Stanley conducted the examination and his plan was to take up each of the subsidiary corporations comprised in the Steel Trust, first ask Judge Gary if he was a Director in that company, obtain a statement as to its capital stock, bonds, and properties, and then ask if it was a competitive corporation. To this for the first four or five corporations named Judge Gary answered that the corporation was not a competitive corporation.

When finally Mr. Stanley asked him about the Carnegie Steel Company it suddenly dawned upon Judge Gary that it was time to pause and take counsel with himself and see whither he was being led. There was a pause for fully two minutes, an da hush fell upon the room as every one anticipated that some revelation out of the ordinary was coming. The colloquy at this point was as follows:

"Are you a Director in the Carnegie Steel Company?"

"I am."

"Is that a subsidiary company of the United States Steel Corporation?"

"It is."

"Was that company ever at any time an independent company competing with other companies manufacturing like products?"

"It was."

"Does it now compete with the other subsidiary companies of the United States Steel Corporation?"

Here occurred a long pause, the witness evidently weighing in his mind the words he was about to utter.

"I should say it does, putting my interpretation on the word," replied Judge Gary. "I wish to be accurate, of course. I intend to be perfectly frank with you and to give you the exact facts so that you may place your own construction upon the facts. Undoubtedly the subsidiary companies of the United States Steel Corporation are influenced and ultimately controlled by the United States Steel Corporation because it is the owner of their stocks. Now the subsidiary companies have their Boards of Directors respectively, and a full line of officials from President down have the right and the power to act independently of the United States Steel Corporation. But inasmuch

CORONER CALLED; NO CASE.

Couldn't See Young Man Whose Mother Was Dying in Hospital.

Late yesterday afternoon a man, who said his name was Orcutt, called up the District Attorney's office and said his mother was dying of blood poisoning at the private hospital at 33 East Thirty-third Street. He was referred to Assistant District Attorney Rubin, in charge of the homicide bureau, who notified the Coroner's office to send up for the woman's ante-mortem statement.

Coroner Holtzhauser, to whom the case was assigned, was out working on another matter, and it was not until he got home for dinner that he received word of the affair. He reached the hospital about 8 o'clock. It is conducted by the Private Hospital Association, and is the institution directed for a number of years by the late Dr. W. T. Bull. Its present head is Dr. John B. Walker, and associated with him is Dr. John F. Erdmann, who has been connected with the institution for fourteen years.

Neither of the physicians was at the hospital when the Coroner arrived and he was taken to the room of Mrs. Emma E. Orcutt by Miss Joy, Superintendent of nurses. They found Mrs. Orcutt unconscious, and were unable to rouse her after trying for twenty minutes. The Coroner found that it would be impossible to take an ante-mortem statement. He learned from Miss Joy that the woman's son was George W. Orcutt of 259 West 139th Street, where he lived with his mother before she was removed to the hospital, and with his sister. The records showed that Mrs. Orcutt was admitted to the institution on May 24 and was operated on by Dr. Erdmann for liver trouble last Sunday.

Coroner Holtzhauser went uptown to see the son, but was told by a Swedish maid that the son and daughter had both gone out and that she was alone in the house. From a neighboring drug store he called up the house by telephone, and was answered by a man who said he was a friend of the family and that Mr. Orcutt was out.

"I don't intend to be made a fool of," the Coroner said over the telephone. "A complaint has been made and I am here to investigate it. If there isn't anything to investigate I will drop it."

He was told that Mr. Orcutt would telephone him when he returned. Soon after a reporter for THE TIMES called at the house, and the door was opened by Mr. Orcutt. He denied at first that he knew anything about the matter. Finally he admitted that it was he who had called up the District Attorney's office.

"The District Attorney sent Mr. Stickney up to the hospital to see me and Dr. Erdmann," he said, "and he advised me to drop the matter. I was wild to think my mother was dying there, as a result, in belief of treatment she received long before she was sent to the hospital or Dr. Erdmann was called in. Her original trouble was merely rheumatism of the knee. After certain treatment she went South in the Winter, and on her return she developed this serious illness. Our family physician called in Dr. Erdmann, and she was taken to the hospital for an operation.

"Mr. Stickney advised me that I had no proof on which to prosecute anybody and that I would simply get myself in trouble by pressing the matter. With my mother dying and my sister greatly upset, I thought best to do nothing further."

Dr. Erdmann said Mr. Orcutt had apparently become overwrought through his distress over his mother's illness and had acted hastily.

Mrs. Orcutt is the widow of W. B. Orcutt, Vice President of the Federal Lithographing Company, who died about three years ago. She is 50 years old. The son is 28 and the daughter is 23.

At midnight it was said at the hospital that Mrs. Orcutt's condition was unchanged.

AUTO OVER BRIDGE; 3 DIE.

Philadelphia Party Are Hurled from Viaduct When Car Runs Wild.

HARRISBURG, Penn., June 1.—Three persons were killed and one probably fatally hurt to-night when an automobile driven by C. A. Sefton, a prominent carriage manufacturer, got beyond control and dashed off the Mulberry Street viaduct, hurling its occupants fifty feet below on piles of building material stored beneath the bridge. The dead are:

Mr. SEFTON.

WILLIAM R. HARRAR of Harrar & Chamberlain, leather merchants.

Mrs. ROBERT W. DUNLOP, wife of the manager of a bond firm.

Miss Laura M. Neilson of New Bloomfield was seriously injured.

The accident occurred at a time when the viaduct, a concrete bridge over half a mile long, was crowded with automobiles and teams.

Mr. Sefton was driving the car up an approach and had just reached the main driveway, when, to avoid a machine moving toward him, he was forced to make a curve. The automobile became unmanageable and dashed across the driveway, smashing a concrete post to pieces and going over the side.

The four occupants fell on almost solid concreate left by the builders of the bridge, and the machine, turning turtle, fell upon them. The two men and Mrs. Dunlop were crushed to death, and when the horrified spectators ran to the wreck they found Miss Neilson barely alive. She was hurried to a hospital, where surgeons gave little hope of her recovery.

BEAT DAUGHTER'S ADMIRER.

Mrs. Hinman and Son Use an Umbrella and Chair on C. W. Lewis.

Special to The New York Times.

WINSTED, Conn., June 1.—Mrs. Charles Hinman of 45 Decatur Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., who has a Summer residence in Southbury, and her son Edward, aged 21, are charged with assaulting Charles W. Lewis, a motorist, at the Curtiss House in Woodbury yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Hinman is said to have employed an umbrella in the attack and her son a chair. Warrants have been issued for their arrest.

Mrs. Hinman and her son were driving by the Curtiss House yesterday afternoon in an automobile, when she saw Lewis seated on the hotel veranda. The machine was stopped quickly and both alighted; then, it is said, they made an attack on Lewis, who sought refuge in the office, closing and locking the door after him. Mrs. Hinman and her son broke down the door and smashed a window and, gaining admittance, resumed the attack on Lewis, which is said to be owing to the latter's attentions to Mrs. Hinman's daughter, Elsie, aged 16, who resides with her father in Woodbury. The Hinmans, who are reputed to be wealthy, live apart. Each instituted divorce proceedings against the other last Winter.

Mrs. Lewis, now of Oxford, also recently sued her husband for divorce and alimony.

Murphy Sees Mayor—Baker Does Not.

Charles F. Murphy, ex-City Chamberlain Charles H. Hyde, and ex-Police Commissioner Baker called at the Mayor's office yesterday. They came separately, but left together. Mr. Baker did not see the Mayor, although Mr. Murphy and Mr. Hyde did.

Mr. Murphy said he had "dropped in just to inquire about the Mayor's health."

RIOTOUS MEN JEER AT GAMBLING RAIDS

TWO HOUSES BROKEN UP

Raiders Come Away with Roulette and Crap Outfits and Seventeen Prisoners for Whom They Had Warrants.

For more than an hour late yesterday afternoon the block in Seventh Avenue, from Times Square to Forty-first Street, was clogged on both sides of the street by men, women, and boys, all gaping at the white and green painted windows of a three-story building at 388 Seventh Avenue. Over the hall door a sign read, "Club." A traffic policeman was on guard there. Inside the word was noised around. Lieut. Van Twistern and twenty men from Headquarters had just raided an alleged poolroom on the second and third floors, with much smashing of icebox doors and shattering of skylights, to let the detectives in upon some 150 patrons of the place.

About 75 per cent. of the onlookers were of the gambling fraternity, according to their own talk, though others without were loudly abusing the police and the "stool pigeon" who, it was said, had given them information.

Presently the sightseers became so turbulent that half a dozen policemen were added to the guard, and a mounted man was called upon to drive his horse squarely into the midst of the crowd as a last means of clearing the sidewalk while the raid was going on upstairs. As soon as he cleared one side, however, the crowd filled in on the other.

Every now and then single patrons of the "club" were allowed to file out of the hall door, they not being among the principals for whom the warrants called. They were quickly gathered up into the bosom of the crowd and gave eager audience as they told with angry and vigorous embellishments of the breaking of doors and skylights when the raid was made. Others in the crowd told of another raid that had been made simultaneously at 100 West Forty-third Street, only two blocks away. Every one wanted to know who was the "stool pigeon."

Suddenly, at 6:30 o'clock, there burst from the doorway a flying wedge of four plain clothesmen, bearing a short and very red-faced fat man. Immediately the crowd rushed in on him. One man, who had been cursing the police all along, pointed a camera at him and snapped it.

"I've got him," he yelled triumphantly, and the crowd cheered.

"There's the crapshooter! Stool pigeon! Kill him!" they yelled.

It was all Lieut. Van Twistern and his men could do to force their man into the street.

The crowd seemed to realize that the "stool pigeon" was being conveyed to the scene of the other raid, for similar purposes of identification; and with savage yells and one concerted rush they poured around him and the shielding detectives. Straight across Times Square rushed the detectives, the informer and the mob, sweeping all others with them in a stumbling current. Dozen fell in a heap around the entrance of the Subway kiosks on the east side of Broadway, and rummeled each other when they found they could not pummel the hated informer. Lieut. Van Twistern, to protect himself and his man, had to impress into service three burly traffic policemen as he passed them and swung into Forty-third Street, the mob still following hooting behind.

As they neared the second place, at 100 West Forty-third Street, where a similar raid had been made only three weeks before, they were met by a second and equally savage mob, lined on both sides of the street. Its cries, which had hitherto been a clamor, now became a roar:

"Stool! Stool! Broiler! Kill him!"

Van Twistern and his men, perspiring from every pore and threatening every one near and far, could hardly shove their man through to the doorway.

There, on the third floor, they had him identify seven prisoners for whom Lieut. Price and twelve Central Office detectives had warrants under the names of John Doorman, John Sheethanger, John Lookout, John Cashier, John Telephone, and the like.

About one hundred other men whom the police had found in the place after they crashed through a thick icebox door at the head of the stairs were allowed to go away after their names had been taken. The police seized as evidence racing charts and crap outfits.

Ten additional men for whom warrants had been issued by Chief Magistrate McAdoo were later taken prisoners to the West Forty-seventh Street Station from the Seventh Avenue place, charged with common gambling. At that place, the police say, they smashed through an icebox door on the first floor, and another on the second, driving seven men from raided charts, roulette wheels, and crap tables on the second floor to the floor above, where they were headed off and taken in tow by half a dozen detectives who had climbed on the roof from an adjoining house and broken through the skylight. This place, the police say, was operated by Paul Kelly of the notorious gang of that name, and one "Kid Beebe." They were not, however, among the prisoners.

VICE SQUAD IS ABOLISHED.

Waldo Scatters the Famous Raiders Among Outlying Precincts.

Police Commissioner Waldo abolished the Vice Squad yesterday. Lieut. Oscar Himmel, head of the squad, was transferred to Brooklyn, and the fifty men under him were scattered to precincts throughout the city to do patrol duty. Thus the much talked of Vice Squad, known first as Driscoll's and later as Flynn's Raiders, goes the way its enemies in the underworld predicted.

The squad first came to grief when it raided the Hesper Club in Second Avenue. After the raid a lawyer representing the Hesper Club stood before a group of reporters and policemen and told the latter with violent language that the club would get even with every one of them. Soon after that the Vice Squad was taken away from Driscoll and placed under Deputy Commissioner Flynn.

Sensational raiding continued under Flynn, who introduced the hydraulic jack as a means of breaking down doors. Things went well until Flynn also raided the Hesper Club. The raiders had to tear the place almost apart to get into it. Soon after the raid Flynn left the department.

Among other things in the Hesper Club was a letter from Senator T. D. Sullivan written on a House of Representatives letterhead to Sam Harris, then President of the Hesper Club, in which Sullivan thanked the club for electing him an honorary member and stating that if he could he would be glad to be of service.

Some at headquarters ventured the opinion last night that the Hesper Club might have been the rock upon which Flynn and the Mayor split, for there is a firm belief around the building that the Hesper Club was the cause of the downfall of the Vice Squad and that the raiders are marked men in the department. Commissioner Waldo gave no reason for abolishing the squad, but at Headquarters it is said he has a scheme of his own for hunting vice.

GARROS IS INJURED, BUT FLIES TO ROME

Catches Up with Beaumont in the Paris-Turin Race—Great Crowd Cheers Him.

RIVAL AIRMEN CLASP HANDS

Beaumont Will Start for Turin To-day, but It Is Doubtful if Garros Can Do So—Frey Still at Pisa.

ROME, June 1.—André Beaumont and Roland Garros, the aviators who have fought each other every mile of the way for supremacy in the great 1,300-mile Paris-Rome-Turin race, are tonight in the Italian capital. The other competitors have met with mishap after mishap, and some of them are still far back in France.

Beaumont, the French officer whose real name is Conneau, and who arrived here yesterday, is resting preparatory to essaying the third and last stage, from Rome to Turin, a distance of 630 kilometers (391 miles.)

Garros, unfortunately, is in bad physical condition. The wrecking of his aeroplane near Pisa yesterday resulted in quite serious injuries to the aviator, but at 10:30 this morning he pluckily clambered into the seat of a new machine and swept away along the Mediterranean coast at a fine speed for Rome. Great crowds had gathered to witness his coming, but Garros almost collapsed when he landed here at 5:10 P. M. He said he felt very ill and could scarcely walk. It was necessary to help him to the committee room.

Garros explained that he suffered greatly from his fall. His right shoulder had been injured, and the hurt was aggravated by the exertion of to-day's flight. It was apparent that he was in acute pain.

After passing over Grosseto, Garros landed at Castiglione della Pescaia, which is about half way between Pisa and Rome. He quickly took on a supply of fuel and sped away again toward the Italian capital. When in sight of Rome he suddenly disappeared. It was at first feared that he had met with an accident, but he landed safely ten miles from the aerodrome, and after overhauling his motor again reappeared in the air and planed gracefully to the aviation ground here amid the deafening cheers of the populace.

The sympathy which Garros always has inspired in the people rendered his reception here even more enthusiastic, if that was possible, than the greeting accorded yesterday to Beaumont. The crowd to-day was of enormous proportions. It is estimated that at least 500,000 persons witnessed the graceful descent of Garros.

Vociferous cries of "Bravo, Garros!" and "Viva Francia!" filled the air as the Frenchman circled the aerodrome and then landed.

Beaumont, hearing of Garros's arrival, rushed to greet him. The vast crowd burst into cheers when the two friendly rivals appeared on a balcony clasping hands. It is probable that Beaumont will start on the last leg of the journey before Garros, who, if he continues tomorrow, will do so only by reason of sheer grit.

Frey, the German representative, who also was injured by the wrecking of his machine near Pisa, is still awaiting a new machine before starting from that place.

Vidart succeeded in making an excellent flight from Nice to Genoa in a little more than three hours. From the latter place he flew direct to Pisa, and, after reporting there, continued on in the direction of Rome. He seemed in a fair way to reach the capital, but was compelled to land at Cecina, about thirty-five miles from Pisa, on account of motor trouble. In making the ground the left wing of his aeroplane was broken, but he himself was not hurt. He hopes to make repairs so that he can start to-morrow morning.

Kimmerling, who has had a long list of misfortunes, left Brignoles for Nice this evening, but almost immediately collided with a tree. His machine was damaged and Kimmerling, discouraged at the run of ill-luck, said that if he met with a fresh mishap to-morrow he would abandon the race.

Bathiat arrived to-night at Lyons, having been delayed by another breakdown.

Lieut. Lucca of the French Army, who, under orders from the French Minister of War, was accompanying the contestants on the first stage of the flight, was forced to land at Hyères, in Southern France, owing to a thick fog.

SUSPECT MORE SUGAR FRAUD

Philadelphia Jury Is Ascertaining If Government Has Been Swindled.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., June 1.—An investigation into possible sugar frauds, whereby the Government may have been defrauded of duty on many thousand pounds of sugar weighed at this port, is believed to be the purpose of a secret inquiry conducted before the Federal Grand Jury here by J. Whitaker Thompson, United States District Attorney, and Assistant United States District Attorney Henry M. Arnold to-day.

William L. Whitelock, who was a clerk in charge of the tare weights for the Spreckels Sugar Refinery here about eight years ago, and W. L. Child, Dock Superintendent for the same company at that time, are said to have been subjected to a rigorous examination.

The custom, it is said, was to weigh the sugar first in bags, and then to weigh the empty bags, deducting this from the gross weight in order to arrive at the weight of actual sugar on which duty had to be paid. The questions put to Whitelock, it is said, were designed to show that in the weighing of the bags the employes were instructed to select such bags as still contained a considerable weight of sugar, either by reason of moisture or careless emptying. The weight of these selected bags—which constituted one-tenth of the entire number—it was held, was multiplied by ten and deducted from the gross weight, leaving an unduly small net weight on which duty was paid. Thereafter, the inquiry tried to show, the sugar was washed or even boiled thoroughly out of the "empty" bags.

The testimony of Whitelock and Child was kept secret, but it is understood that both were questioned on similar lines. Thomas Smith, who succeeded Whitelock at the refinery wharf, was also examined.

Prior to 1902 the Government had an Inspector stationed at the place where the bags were emptied to see that all the sugar was extracted, but the Inspector was removed after the duty on raw sugar was abolished in 1902, and he was not replaced when the duty was restored two years later.

Following the suspension of Henry Clay Marshall, Chief Weigher of the Customs House on Wednesday, the first important step since the beginning of the inquiry, Paul D. Johnson was appointed today as Assistant Weigher to fill his place temporarily.

CUERNAVACA BEING LOOTED BY A MOB

REYES SAILS FOR MEXICO

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, June 1.—A mob formed of persons of the lower classes and insurrecto troops is looting Cuernavaca.

The meagre details received indicate a repetition of the Cholula horror.

There were disorders this evening at Xochimilco, four miles from this city. Troops were sent from here on street cars. The mob sacked a few stores and houses, but on the arrival of the troops the rioters withdrew outside the city limits.

An engagement is reported between Federals and Maderists at Cuicatlan, Oaxaca. The Maderists opposed the opening of the railroad. Disorders are reported from many smaller towns throughout the country.

Governors, Secretaries of State, Judges, Jefe Politicos, and practically all functionaries of the Diaz Government are resigning.

Foodstuffs are rapidly rising in price, the maintenance of large forces of Maderists requiring heavy drains on supplies near the cities. The business outlook grows worse every day.

Minister of Justice Hernandez has sent another request to Rodolfo Reyes that he accept the sub-Secretaryship of Justice. The request now takes on the aspect of a command. Reyes has given the letter to the press, together with his indifferent answer. He is apparently playing for time while awaiting the return of his father.

There is to be a War Office investigation of the Presidential salute and other honors paid to Gen. Diaz on his departure from Vera Cruz.

Finance Minister Madero refused today to honor Oscar Braniff's bill for 2,500 pesos for expenses while he was acting as a go-between in the peace conference. To settle the trouble ex-Minister of Finance Limantour paid the amount personally.

HAVANA, June 1.—Gen. Bernardo Reyes, ex-Minister of War of Mexico, who was recalled from Europe to Mexico to assist in the re-establishment of peace, left here this evening on board the steamer Fürst Bismarck, bound for Vera Cruz.

MADERO STARTS TO-DAY.

Ball in His Honor at Juarez—Rebel Cannon Given to El Paso.

Special to The New York Times.

JUAREZ, Mexico, June 1.—Francisco I. Madero, Jr., is ready to start for Mexico City to-morrow. He will leave El Paso at 1:30 A. M. on the Sunset mail train over the Southern Pacific, arriving at Spofford Junction, Texas, early on Saturday morning. There he will board the special train that is to take him and his party to Mexico City. At Piedras Negros, opposite Eagle Pass, Texas, the armed guard that is to accompany the victorious revolutionist leader will board his train. The Madero special is due in Mexico City at 10 A. M. Wednesday.

Extraordinary precautions will be taken for the safety of the train. A thorough inspection of railroad tracks is to be made and a pilot train is to precede Madero's special to look for any dynamite mine or for any bands of deserters from the insurrecto army, who might plan to burn bridges. The necessity for these precautions has caused unconcealed anxiety among members of the Madero party, some of whom believe that the train will not be able to run on schedule time.

The insurrecto army to-day presented to the City of El Paso one of the two homemade cannon that were used in the battles in the State of Chihuahua. The gun is known as "Long Tom," and is one of two manufactured by Gen. Giuseppe Garibaldi at Madera, Chihuahua, out of parts of a railway locomotive.

Señor Madero was present at the presentation of the cannon in the City Hall Park, El Paso. Mayor Kelly of El Paso accepted the gun for the city. Eight hundred mounted insurrecto soldiers paraded through the streets of El Paso before the presentation ceremony. Big crowds greeted them and shouted "Viva Madero!"

Señor Madero to-night attended a ball given in his honor in the Custom House, where, two years ago, President Diaz in great splendor received President Taft. Those who arranged the ball attempted to outdo the magnificence which surrounded Diaz on that occasion.

Leading a grand march, Señor Madero walked over the waxed floor beneath a bower of flags and bunting and among a bewildering mass of standards and white columns. Many Americans mingled in the crowd.

It was announced to-day that Miguel Ahumada, the Federal Governor of Chihuahua, has sent his resignation to the Chihuahua Legislature. It will be acted upon to-morrow and Abram Gonzales, the Provisional Governor, will be elected to succeed Ahumada.

Madero and Gen. Navarro, the defeated commander of the Federal garrison of Juarez, met in the Hotel Sheldon at El Paso this morning. It was the first meeting since Madero spirited Navarro out of Juarez following the demand of Col. Villa that Navarro be turned over to him to be executed. To-day's meeting between the former enemies was cordial.

Indictments were returned to-day by the Grand Jury at El Paso against Daniel de Villiers and W. L. Dunne, who are charged with conspiracy against the life of Madero. Extradition will be sought from the Mexican Government for Dunne, who is under arrest at Monterey, Mexico.

BOMB EMPTIES TENEMENT.

Explosion Drives Out a Hundred Tenants of East 11th Street House.

The hundred or more tenants of the four-story tenement at 338 E. Eleventh Street fled to the street early this morning when a bomb was exploded in the hallway. Marble slabs were torn from the walls of the hallway, the ceiling fell in and the two front doors were blown out. Nobody was injured.

Several explosions have occurred in the vicinity, which is known to the police as the Bomb District. Patrolman Warner heard the explosion and ran up in time to find men, women and children rushing through the wrecked hallway and clinging to the fire escapes.

The damage caused was estimated at $500. The owner of the house is said to be Antone Margio of Bedford Avenue, Brooklyn.

J. J. HILL PLANS TO RETIRE.

$600,000,000 Mortgage the First Step—Denies Stories of Road Consolidations.

Special to The New York Times.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., June 1.—James J. Hill is preparing the way for his retirement from active business life, and the filing of the $600,000,000 mortgage on the Great Northern properties is the first step to that end, according to Mr. Hill's own statement. He characterized to-day as "rubbish" stories of a Great Northern and Burlington consolidation and of the combining of the Northern Pacific with the Chicago and Northwestern or Chicago Great Western.

"Preparations for fifty years to come for the retirement of bonds now outstanding as they fall due," said Mr. Hill, "and for other issues to provide money to keep up the road and build extensions and make improvements is the true reason for the mortgage.

"The Great Northern and Northern Pacific are jointly and severally liable for the Burlington bonds," Mr. Hill continued. "We could not provide a financial plan for a long time ahead and not take these bonds into account. We are not only liable for our half, but contingently for the whole. It does not mean that we have any fear that we will have to pay it all. We don't have to pay any of it until 1921.

"Burlington bonds can be called and retired at 105 at any time, according to an agreement at the time of issue, but I do not think any one wants to call in 4 per cent. bonds at 105. But how could we plan for the future and not take into account our contingent liability in these Burlington 4s?

"I am going to quit," Mr. Hill declared, "but I cannot say just when. The mortgage makes a foundation upon which, for fifty years to come, the road will be able to keep pace with the growth of the country, and is the first step toward enabling me to lay down business."

RESCUED GIRL TEACHERS.

Bathers Dragged Two Out at Hudson Park When Their Canoe Capsized.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., June 1.—Two wet school teachers thanked George Hohmann on the beach at Hudson Park this afternoon, when he rescued them from the bay after they had capsized a canoe in which they were watching bathers. Neither of the young women would disclose her identity.

The rescue was witnessed by a crowd of several hundred persons, including Mayor Harry E. Colwell. The girls were paddling about 300 feet from shore when one turned and waved to a friend on shore. The canoe capsized and the girls were thrown into the water. One girl clung to the canoe, screaming for help as she saw her companion sinking.

Hohmann, who had been swimming and still wore his bathing suit, led several young men to the rescue and reached the sinking girl as she sank for the second time. He had to dive for her, and after a hard swim he brought her safely to shore. Then he returned to aid the other swimmers in the rescue of the second girl.

Mrs. Botina Brown Provided for Young Men She Educated.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 1. — Two young artists, both of whom owe most of their education to the eccentric Mrs. Botina A. Brown, will receive a large share of her $180,000 estate. In her will she left $10,000 to Fred L. Siddons of Washington, and to Howard J. Potter $90,000.

Everything was left to her friends, and the instrument provides that if her relatives offer any objection there are to get $5, and be told to go about their business.

Mrs. Brown took an interest in young Siddons when he was a boy, and gave him practically all that he needed to complete his education. When he showed an artistic bent she gave him an opportunity to study. To Potter she was more like a mother, taking the most intense interest in his work.

HARBURGER OUT AS LEADER.

Finds His Duties as Deputy State Controller Take Too Much Time.

Julius Harburger, Deputy State Controller and Tammany leader of the Tenth Assembly District, announced last night that at a meeting of the Tenth Assembly District Tammany Club to be held on the evening of June 6 he would retire from the leadership of the district. He explained that his present duties as Deputy State Controller do not give him the time to attend to his duties as district leader. He said he would still remain friendly with Charles F. Murphy.

"Mr. Murphy," he said, "is the best and ablest leader Tammany ever had, and if the people only knew him as well as I do there would be only praise instead of criticism."

Mr. Harburger said he would help elect his successor and that the district would remain solidly Democratic.

INDEMNITY TO BOY AND GIRL.

$12,000 for Injuries Due to Jumping Over Cliff When Pursued by Dogs.

In the Circuit Court in Jersey City yesterday a jury gave Bernardine Dierkes, 17 years of age, and William Zimmerman, 9 years of age, both of Hauxhurst Park, Weehawken, $8,000 and $4,000 damages, respectively, against the Hauxhurst Land Company, of which William J. Duer is president. The children were injured on the company's land in Hauxhurst Park on May 31, 1907. While they were picking wild flowers they were set upon by dogs, incited by William Wallace, a watchman, and jumped down a cliff twenty-five feet to escape.

The girl suffered a fracture of the base of the skull, which is permanent, and the sight of the boy's left eye was permanently impaired.

OPENS WRONG DOOR; KILLED.

Actor Falls Down a Dark Stairway While Seeking a Janitor.

The body of a man was discovered late yesterday afternoon at the foot of a stairway in the basement of a rooming house at 248 West Thirty-ninth Street by Julia Murphy, a servant employed in the house. The girl notified Patrolman Kiel, and an ambulance from the New York Hospital brought Dr. Everingham, who declared the man had been dead for several hours.

The body was removed to the West Thirty-seventh Street Station, where John W. Ford, a vaudeville actor, living at 222½ West Forty-third Street, identified it as that of Edward Evans, an old actor. Ford said that Evans and he, while in search of a room on Wednesday evening, entered the hallway of the Thirty-ninth Street house. Evans suddenly disappeared while he was searching for the janitor's apartment, Ford said, and, thinking he had gone to the street, Ford left the building to look for him. He could not find him, he said, and returned home.

Dr. Everingham said that Evans, whose neck was broken, entered the door leading to the basement stairs by mistake and fell to the basement, where the body remained undiscovered for nearly twenty-four hours.

America defeated England yesterday in the first match for the International Polo Cup, which England won once from America, and which America brought back in 1909. When the bell announced that the final period was ended there was first a long-drawn-out and heartfelt sigh from the gathering of 10,000 folk who had watched the contest with almost breathless interest, and then came cheering which rose and fell and then gathered fresh strength until it come to an end in one burst of rejoicing.

And if ever a cheer expressed relief from worry and thankfulness over the outcome this final shout carried that meaning, for it was not until the final gong that victory was assured to the Meadow Brook four, Larry and J. M. Waterbury, Harry Payne Whitney, and Devereux Milburn. When the combatants finally pulled up their exhausted ponies and gathered in a little group on the east side of the field, the ball was in America's territory, perilously close to the narrow space between the blue and white poles that marked America's goal, and on the scoreboard was posted 4½ goals for America and 3 for England.

It was by such narrow margin that America came through the first international match successfully, and until the end of the fifth period the defenders were three goals behind the challengers, whose score then stood at 3½ goals. From the outset of the match the Englishmen played with a vim and vigor which had not been expected of them, while the Americans, who in their last practice match on Saturday were irresistible, seemed swept off their feet. They played as though the realization that America depended on them and that 10,000 yelling and cheering Americans were watching them, hopefully, eagerly, wieghed upon their spirits.

Unsteady at the Start.

They seemed unable to shake of the nervousness that unsteadied their hands and dimmed their eyes. They missed shots in the open which on Saturday they would have sent spinning down the field for long drives the Englishmen, but they were cheers which a good loser must accord a winner. Beneath them it was a heart-sick, disappointed crowd that watched America's chances slowly growing dimmer and dimmer.

And then came the fifth period, in which the tide of battle turned, and America began the irresistible attack which was to return her the victor. Milburn sent a shot from sixty yards spinning toward the British goal. It struck one of the goal posts and a murmur of disappointment arose from the stands, which changed instantly to an excited yell as the ball rebounded and rolled between the posts, a legitimate goal. It was the turning point of the game. The lethargy under which the Meadow Brook four had seemed to labor fell from them. They became again the fast-riding, hard-hitting team they were on Saturday. There was new impetus in their rushes, and behind their hitting was a power which had been missing before.

Americans to the Fore.

It seemed as though the ponies they bestrode became imbued with the same spirit. There seemed not to be an English pony on the field that could head the Meadow Brook string for a run of half the field length. Two goals were made in quick succession, and the period ended showing America tied with her challenger for the first time since the opening period. The rest of the game was as unlike what had gone before as though a different team had come into the field.

America made another goal in the seventh, while England lost half a point through a foul by Wilson, and in the eighth neither side could score. The band played a closing march and the throngs in the stands dispersed for waiting motors and carriages, or for Long Island Railroad trains, congratulating one another fervently on the outcome.

Probably not more than 10,000 persons witnessed the contest, but in this number was a goodly sprinkling of society folk from all over the East. The stands shone brilliant yellow with the newness of pine boards beneath a blazing sun, while between them the ground stretched a blanket of green, level as a billiard table and seemingly as smooth. To the north the Wheatley Hills rose, cool and inviting, while to the south stretched the sweep of the Hempstead Plains, dotted as early as 2 o'clock by automobiles and rigs of all kinds bent for the field.

Between 2 and 4 o'clock the stands began to fill up. The long stretches of gleaming yellow were blotted out here and there by the more subdued coloring of the gowns and coats which blended into one shade, bright enough in itself, but pleasantly dull in comparison to the shining boards. From the upper rows of each stand floated alternately the flags of America and England. The same flags draped together, were festooned about the little white clubhouse, used as a members' stand on the west side of the grounds. On the green a band played martial music, intermingling the airs of America and England.

Parade of the Ponies.

It was growing close to 4:30 now, and presently from the paddock at the southwest end of the field, above which floated the British flag, appeared a string of polo ponies, each bestrode by a groom. They paraded slowly along the side boards, the crowd cheering as they passed, each nearly perfect specimens of horse flesh. Last in line was the dainty Energy, declared by all Englishmen to be the greatest polo pony ever bred.

The parade passed the main west stand, turned the field at the north end and started back, just as the American ponies appeared, these led by grooms, instead of ridden, and followed in the path just taken by their adversaries. Again the crowd cheered and it was noticed that, although of no greater build, the American ponies seemed heavier than the English ones.

And then a blue and white coated rider appeared on the ground and dashed down the field, driving ahead of him the four-and-a-half-ounce polo ball, each one especially weighed before the match to insure a uniform weight. Behind him presently came the blue-shirted, white-trousered English Army officers, and the crowd sat up straighter in their seats.

The referee, Joshua Crane of Boston, rode over in front of the clubhouse and filled his saddlebags with new balls. In the field the eight horsemen circled about, keeping close together, the Americans on the north and the Englishmen on the south. The bell beneath the automatic clock on the score board clanged out its warning. Mr. Crane rode toward the waiting riders, a new white ball balanced in his hand. The backs of the combatants cavorted about as their riders jockeyed for position. Finally, as in former days, the horses gathered at the starting barrier, the became still for an instant. Then the referee's shot cut, the ball rolled beneath the hoofs of the ponies, and the first of the matches which are to determine whether England shall again lift the cup was on.

Larry Waterbury's Fall.

Beneath the burning of the sun it had been supposed that the ground, soaked in Wednesday's downpour, would be dried out, but apparently there were still slippery spots. Larry Waterbury found one first. He was riding at top speed, Capt. Wilson pressing him closely and trying to ride him off from the ball, when Cinderella, Waterbury's first-string pony, slipped. Waterbury plunged over the animal's head almost beneath the heels of Wilson's mount. He rolled out of the way, however, and rose, covered with grass stain and dirt but apparently unhurt. He marched off across the field for a fresh pony, while the crowds cheered his pluck.

The second fall was Monte Waterbury's midway in the fourth period. He, like his brother, was engaged in a riding-off duel with Capt. Cheape when his mount stumbled and he fell in the midst of a group of prancing ponies. How he escaped being kicked seemed a miracle to those in the stands, and when he rose to his feet it appeared for a moment as though the fall had stunned him. Like his brother, however, he refused to quit, and, mounting his pony again, was off at top speed.

It was in the fifth period that the Englishmen showed the quality of their sportsmanship. The American four, far off in the southeast paddock, did not hear the whistle to resume play, though the Englishmen were gathered in front of the clubhouse, where the referee, Mr. Crane, sat his mount ready to throw out the ball. The American four were 100 yards away, but Mr. Crane tossed the ball on the grass at the first ring of the bell.

A gasp went up from the stands as it became evident that the Englishmen had only to sweep the ball, uncontested, to another goal. The gasp changed to a cheer, however, when one of the Englishmen was seen to ride slowly forward, reach down, and touching the ball gently with his stick send it rolling back to the feet of the referee. Until their opponents were as ready as themselves the Englishmen would take no part in the game.

Throughout the game was marked by just such courtesy on both sides, and at its conclusion the eight players sat for a moment together, shaking hands and exchanging compliments and condolences. Then they galloped off to their respective paddocks, while over the field, now deep in long, drawn shadows from the stands, appeared a small army of red-capped tampers, replacing the divots and getting the turf in shape for the second match on Monday.

Commissioners are said to have had fabulous sums to wager on the result. Rumor had it that Payne Whitney wanted to lay $20,000 to $1,000 on the Americans. Another sportsman was willing to place $10,000 to $1,000, while a bet of $10,000 to $800 was recorded. Seven and a half to one was the price on tap, although some wagers were placed at five and six to one.

Midway of the game even money looked like a good wager, with the English end the better one to take. In sizing up the game afterward, one of the best-qualified men in America on the sport asserted that the next match was anybody's as the teams were evenly matched.

AS AMERICAN EXPERT SAW IT.

British Team, Even with a Heavy Handicap, Made a Great Fight.

The British team relied on nineteen ponies, while the Americans had twenty-two. The challengers, Capt. Leslie Cheape, Capt. A. Noel Edwards, Capt. J. Hardress Lloyd, and Capt. Herbert H. Wilson, astonished even their most ardent adherents by the wonderful form they showed in this first encounter on the Meadow Brook field.

Instead of the "overwhelming sweep" that had been prophesied by the knowing ones as the style in which the Meadow Brook "Big Four" would defeat the visiting military contingent, the latter held the American quartet safe throughout four periods by a score of 2 to 1, earned in the opening bouts, and outplayed them in the fifth period to the tune of 1½ to ½. By that time, however, the English officers had shot their bolt, and, as expected, they were eclipsed in the last three periods because their ponies could not stand the strain.

Of British individualism there was barely a trace, but of team cohesion and carefully directed attack such an exhibition as amazed every member of the Meadow Brook four and elicited thunderous applause.

It was well understood by all polo men scattered among the thousands of spectators who crowded grand stands, clubhouse, and promenading spaces that the English team went into this contest heavily handicapped by a scarcity of serviceable ponies, non-acclimatization, and comparative greenness of mounts, partial fitness of men and the latters' strangeness to the field and to the American method of play. Notwithstanding all this, it took hardly two minutes after the ball was thrown in at 4:40, and one quick goal snapped up by Mr. Whitney to open the ball, to incite the Englishmen to plunge into their best team work.

The English Tactics.

Having studied the racing style, wide-riding, and long-ball driving tactics of the "Big Four" throughout the twenty-two practice games played by the latter at Lakewood and Westbury since early in April, the British officers, realizing their own shortcomings and the reduced equine equipment to be depended upon, hit upon a plan of action and a series of close position plays, which met the situation to a nicety and put a totally unexpected phase upon the contest.

Getting possession of the ball after the Meadow Brooks had drawn first blood, Capt. Lloyd so placed it that his "forwards," Cheape and Edwards, were enabled to play with it like a cat plays with a mouse. Ignoring all brilliant charges they worked in solid phalanx to keep the ball moving from midfield up into American territory, which forced the Meadow Brook ponies on "tenter hooks," and wore them down by reason of repeated rapid turning.

That this sort of thing was new to the home contingent was apparent when Mr. Whitney was seen to realize the situation and force the British cordon in midfield for a clear lead after a long-swing drive that brought onlookers to their feet. His "back" also came through on the black mare Cinderella like a shot. The pace was terrific and the turn too sharp, so that in a flash there was a tanglefooted pony down and a not-too-clever horseman rolling on the green. The gymnastic effort did not disturb Larry Waterbury a particle, but the Englishmen were quick to take advantage of the situation, and inside of another minute the heavyweight Wilson, on his own little chestnut, Wilful, had pressed the perturbed No. 1, in white, so effectively that Cheape got clear through on Nutmeg.

Then while Whitney was busily engaged with Lloyd on his best mount, Energy, Edwards picked up the ball from one of Cheape's clever leaves and, by the narrowest of squeaks, scored from an obtuse angle stroke delivered while the sphere was moving so that it glinted right across a couple of inches in front of the goal and crossed the line for the maiden British tally. The cheers broke out like rattling musketry, and then it was that the experts realized that there would be no sweeping victory by the Meadow Brook Blues.

Americans on the Defensive.

The public became aware of this condition of things when it was seen that the Americans were on the defensive for a greater part of the second period. The Englishmen were knocking north, and, after two full field flights, the White No. 1, on his fresh mount, Kingfisher, essayed to get the ball "out of Coventry" by working it to the boards. Monte Waterbury blossomed into tiptop form just then, and he registered a carry that will live long in polo history. But it was a case of love's labor lost, for Wilson's mallet caught the ball right on the danger line, and around the bunch he delivered it right into Cheape's reach.

The gallant Captain leaned over for his drive, and sure enough the ball lofted over all and went on its way at meteoric speed. Edwards had turned in time, and his mallet passed it to glory after exactly six minutes and ten seconds of the most remarkable polo seen in years.

From what has been said in preface it can easily be seen that the Meadow Brooks were up against an avalanche of talent. The third period was like the second, only more so, and it is some consolation to know that the home organization had by this time become fully attuned to the situation. A column could be written on this period and still not do it justice, and it is safe to say that polo ists in general and the American team in particular absorbed more data on Anglo-Indo "pulu" during this interesting bout that could ever be gained from a thousand text-books.

The tuning tactics continued throughout the fourth period, and two minutes of it were sufficient to test the footing of J. M. Waterbury's brown mare Vaquin. She was coming at pony express speed as the ball shot by her front hoofs, and the rider was on the point of picking up one of his brother's leaves when the mare went to earth. They only took out fifty seconds, however, and again the Britishers profited by the "breather."

But Whitney was wound up to concert pitch by this time and his "Wake up, Larry," was an indication of how the wind was blowing. The famous Captain rushed up into the game to set a much-needed example, and his sledge-hammer stroke from midfield to the goal line will leave a lasting impression upon all who saw it. But the opposing Captain returned the placing and then Milburn swung on to a musical accompaniment from the stands that had the desired effect.

A Brilliant Drive.

The world-renowned "back" immediately made the most brilliant drive of his whole career. It was an over shoulder slash that promised a pulverized ball, but the mallet lifted it neatly and it sailed through the ether while the whole cavalcade galloped in its wake. All was for nothing, however, and the period closed with the English score one goal ahead. Milburn waxed a trifle reckless as the pace increased, and a fine of half a goal resulted when he crossed Capt. Cheape at a dangerous angle. The latter, however, was hardly less calm when pushed by Whitney three minutes later, and he likewise suffered the loss of half a goal, which contrasted adversely to the remarkable "carries" that Edwards put on record in the middle of the fifth period. It looked then as if the Englishmen would win and there was an audible chuckle in the ranks of the team's supporters.

But they reckoned without a proper regard for "Milburn with his mad up." From half-field he put the ball right into the British bower and so blocked all opposing play during the next five minutes that Larry Waterbury was finally enabled to get possession "for keeps" and to score amid a hurricane of applause.

This put the score 3½ even, and the adjective is still uncoined that could adequately describe the vim that the Meadow Brooks resurrected when Mr. Whitney called upon them to go into action. The Captain drove it from quarter field, and then forced his pony Conover to the limit for a flying shot south. Milburn came through at the psychological moment, and, "getting on straight," had his direction with him, so scored without extraordinary effort.

Wilson crossed Whitney in the closing period, when his team was playing 'corners and overs' to fill out the time, and avoid counter scoring. The wind-up was appropriate for a tussel of such pony-burning character, and when the historians get their chance to consider calmly the verdict will undoubtedly be that the Meadow Brooks were "off edge" up to half time, outgeneraled in several periods, but came up to their original form in the sixth and seventh rounds, and, of course, their ponies easily surpassed in the aggregate the mounts of the British team. Had they transferred ponies—well, that's a story which may best be left to the imagination.

ENGLISH VIEW OF THE GAME.

Capt. Creed Analyzes for The London Times the Result and Its Causes.

Capt. Creed, the English polo expert, who was especially sent here by The London Times to describe the international polo match, cabled the following to his paper from the Meadow Brook grounds after the game:

"The success of the Meadow Brook team to-day entitles them to the claim of being the best polo team hitherto seen in any country. The causes of their excellence are worth probing. Just as the genius of Sloan invented the so-called 'American style' of jockeyship, so present-day American polo owes its genesis to the genius of the Waterburys, whose great natural abilities were, both by information and circumstances, cultivated to the highest point of perfection.

"At no safe odds [illegible] they could scarcely more than toddle their father encouraged them to knock polo balls about. They were becoming accomplished players at an age when English boys are hardly out of Eton jackets. For their years they must have played more seasons of polo than any one else. They realized early the important influence of other games, particularly racquets, in perfecting wrist and eye, and they practiced them assiduously. The result was that they gradually acquired a variety of strokes which had not hitherto been dreamed of, except perhaps by the finest Indian players—a curious case of East and West meeting without any connecting link in England.

"The success of the Waterburys naturally produced intelligent imitation, of which Milburn is the most shining example. In his case the pupil overtook the master, for he took the place of 'Larry' Waterbury at back. The latter proved his versatility when, after two years' absence from the game, he became, without effort, a marvelous forward.

"But all this wealth of talent would in all likelihood never have been collected and might have become rusty without the organizing genius of Harry Payne Whitney, who has the knack of getting people of diverse temperaments to work with the harmony essential in successful team play. It is not necessary to probe into private province or to inquire what success they have met in other walks of life to realize that the four players composing the Meadow Brook team are remarkable men. And if we have been beaten we can without loss of pride take off our hats to men who compel our willing admiration.

"In many ways the score and run of to-day's match came as a surprise. After large scores, invariably running into double figures, it seemed improbable that the combined scores of both sides would not exceed a single figure, and few would have supposed that England, at the end of the fifth period, would lead by 3½ goals to 1½, and finally be beaten by 4½ goals to 3, having in many ways enjoyed much the best of the game. But, though beaten, England was very far from being disgraced, for it was certainly through no lack of courage, stamina, or essential quality that they failed to retain their lead to the end.

"The Meadow Brook form toward the closing stage of the game was very different from that of the earlier part, with the exception of Milburn, who played magnificently all through, and who is entitled to the lion's share of the credit for the American victory. Whitney also possibly played the game of his life, and the defeat of the English was due chiefly to the efforts of the American backs. It is only fair, however, to the Waterburys to make allowance for two falls of 'Larry' Waterbury, when Cinderella put him down twice in the first period, and for the fall of J. M. Waterbury, Jr., in the fourth period, for although they were not seriously hurt, such mishaps are bound to have some detrimental effect. The mishaps were due to nobody's fault, and probably are to be accounted for by the slipperiness of the ground, though such a contingency had not been expected.

"If the number of shots at goal had been counted probably the English had four shots to one opportunity given to the Americans, but it must be remembered that the English forwards take chances from much longer range than is followed by American tactics, and the same high percentage of successful shots is not to be expected. All the same, with a little more luck to-day the English score might have been more than doubled, one ball striking the goal posts, but going the wrong side, while the goal hit by Milburn at the critical moment, which seemed to turn the fortunes of his side, also hit the post but went through.

"Of the English players, Lloyd and Edwards stood out, indelibly stamped with the hallmark of great players, which they were believed to be. Edwards was a revelation to those who have followed his form in America, and were not aware that he had not been able to show of what he is capable. To-day he rose to the occasion, and the spectators were quick to discover and admire his merits, which are as attractive as they are effective.

"It would be impossible to overvalue the services which Lloyd rendered to his side. He never failed them, either when attacking or on the defensive, and the critical situation was almost invariably solved by his efforts. He held his team together like a real leader, and it is to no lack of combination or misunderstanding among the players that the defeat of England must be credited. Their performance calls for no excuses; it was in every way worthy of them and of their country, but it is only fair to say that the superiority of the American ponies was quite as great as had been expected, Cheape in particular being the worst mounted man on the field, which necessarily prevented him from doing himself justice.

"Wilson played with steadiness and coolness, and though it is only natural to regret that Fate was not kinder to England in the matter of shooting at goal, the Englishmen may be congratulated on what may, perhaps without offense, be called an unexpectedly fine performance. The second match, which will be played on Monday, remains a much more interesting problem than seemed probable.

"The run of to-day's game may broadly be divided into two distinct phases, during the first five periods England being decidedly in the ascendant, while the Meadow Brook team, some of whom at times apparently seemed nervous, were as a natural result on the defensive. Then, in the sixth period, an abrupt change came over the fortunes of the game, Whitney appearing to realize that heroic efforts were necessary if his side were to win the game. Fortunately for Meadow Brook, he was able by example and precept to infuse the necessary inspiration into his men; not that Milburn required encouragement, for his achievements throughout the game had been quite worthy, even of his greatest reputation.

"In many ways, although the result of the match was not unexpected, it is a puzzling game of which to convey adequate impression, for although many might consider the Englishmen unlucky not to win on the day's play, paradoxical though it may sound, Meadow Brook might be held unlucky if they had lost."

AMERICANS WIN FIRST POLO MATCH

ber, they have done remarkably well, and even if they fail to bring back the cup this year the prospects are that it will be recovered at no distant date.

"Now that we have seen that our players can hold their own against the formidable Meadow Brook quartet it should stimulate England to further effort.

"Of course, the question of ponies has had a great deal to do with the result. If an English team ever visits America again we trust that sportsmen will come forward and lend their best ponies and sufficient of them, so that we may meet America on level terms."

1,500 AUTOS IN THE FIELD.

Long Lines Parked Around the Match, Many States Being Represented.

At least one-half of the crowd which lined the four sides of the field made the trip to Westbury by automobile and the machines presented a fine spectacle in the parking spaces on the south and west sides of the playing field. Practically every class of vehicle was represented in the motley array, the stately limousine being there in large numbers, and even the toy runabout held its place. In fact, the only style of car that was not noticeable in the long line of machines was the usually popular taxicab.

On the extreme south end of the field the early automobiles took up parking space. They were parked in a line extending east and west as wide as the playing field, about sixty machines in each row, and six rows were filled before the game began. Most of the occupants of these cars made no effort to find room in the stands or boxes, preferring to view the game from their cars or take up standing room on the south end of the field, immediately adjoining the parking space.

A long, narrow line of machines stretched along the east background, running from the clubhouse of the American team, all along the sides of the road from Garden City, which entered the field on the northeast corner. A few stray autos found places still further back in the field, allowing their occupants to get away quickly after the game, instead of figuring in the confusion always attendant upon an event of the kind, where hundreds of machines have to depart by two or three narrow roads.

What was by far the most pretentious display of machines could be seen in the big parking space directly behind the west grand stand on the land formerly used for the Westbury steeplechases. This field could accommodate thousands of machines without any trouble, but it was far from being taxed to its capacity. The machines extended in four long lines, with about 125 cars in each line, and these carried the majority of the social leaders who witnessed the match.

Few pedestrians accepted the opportunity to decorate themselves with the tiny banners and colors on sale by the souvenir men, but autoists embraced it eagerly, and many of the machines came on the field gayly decorated. The Stars and Stripes were, of course, so far ahead of the English colors in number that they seemed to monopolize the decorative layout, but there were at least three machines in the large number which proudly flaunted the colors of John Bull.

Practically every Eastern State was represented among the fifteen hundred cars which formed a line around three sides of the field, and a scattering few bore testimony that their owners belonged in the Far West or South. Observation of the rectangular line of 160 cars which formed the inside line on the south and west sides of the field showed that fourteen States were represented in this alone. New York license tags were greatly in the majority with 97, New Jersey showed 23, Pennsylvania 11, and Connecticut 8. One five-passenger touring car bore a California license tag and a four-passenger car bore a Texas mark. Other States in line were: Massachusetts, 4; Maine, 4; Ohio, 2; Virginia, 2; Delaware, 2; Maryland, 1; Kansas, 1, and Georgia, 1.

The parking arrangements were excellent and the great number of machines were handled with the ease that might be expected in a gathering of only a few machines. The success in this important feature was all the more notable on account of the late arrival of most of the cars. At 3 o'clock, an hour before the game began, hardly one-fifth of the entire crowd had arrived at the field, and both the grand stands and the parking spaces bore a decidedly barren appearance.

Shortly after 3 o'clock the crowd really began to gather, and from that time until the first period had been completed there was a steady line of automobiles entering from two sides of the field. Many came along the main road from Garden City, passing along the north side of the field and entering at the northeast corner, while still another apparently endless line could be seen through the clouds of dust along the road from Hempstead.

How a Polo Game Is Scored.

The teams change ends after each goal, thus alternating in attack and defense north and south. A goal is made when the ball goes over and clear of the line between the goal posts, which are 24 feet apart or above the top of the goal posts between the centre line of the posts. After a goal has been scored the game shall be restarted from the centre of the field. A goal counts one. A safety counts minus one-quarter. A foul counts minus one-half and such other penalty as the referee may impose. Penalties are deducted from the score of the offending team during the game. Whenever a player drives the ball over the end line outside the posts of the goal he is defending it shall be deemed a safety. A player shall not crook his adversary's mallet unless he is on the same side of the adversary's pony as the ball, or in a direct line behind, and his mallet is neither over nor under the adversary's pony. The mallet may not be crooked unless his adversary is in the act of striking the ball. The ball continues in play after the seven and a half minutes' signal is sounded until it hits the sideboards or goes out of bounds. Such overtime is deducted from the subsequent period. Game begins when the referee throws the ball between the contestants, each of whom shall be on his own side of the middle line.

SOCIETY IN THRONGS AT THE POLO MATCH

Fills the Grand Stand and Makes a Fine Display of Fashions.

MANY GO OUT IN MOTOR CARS

Luncheons at the Club House—Not Much Time for Visiting Between the Periods.

Society made a smart showing yesterday afternoon at the International polo contest at Meadow Brook field, and the scene around the clubhouse inclosure during the game was one of animation and color. A cloudless and sapphire sky and a cool wind from the west created conditions almost ideal for the display of fashions out of doors.

Many went out from town by train and automobile in time to luncheon at the Meadow Brook Club before the contest began, while others arrived from the country places near by, where house parties are more numerous now than at any time since the aviation meet last Fall. The recent exodus to Europe seems to have made no gap in the ranks of society, judging from the notables who filled the two large grandstands on the north and south side of the clubhouse. It was one of the largest gatherings of the year.

The affair went with a snap which is rather unusual for outdoor events, and there was little opportunity for folks to promenade. The crowd seemed to descend upon the west side of the field all at once, those coming by motor being supplemented by the well-dressed crowds which arrived on the special electric trains from New York. There was some visiting between the occupants of the boxes between periods, but the intermission of only three minutes had the effect of keeping everybody close to their respective boxes.

The division of the grand stand, with the clubhouse in between, kept some of the occupants of the boxes in the north grand stand wondering who their neighbors might be in the south grand stand, but such was the enthusiasm during the game that the majority of visitors did not seem to mind who was there just as long as the American team won a point.

Col. Roosevelt in Grandstand.

By 4 o'clock the north and south grandstands were comfortably filled. There were boxes reserved for the special guests atop the little white clubhouse, but Col. Roosevelt and Postmaster General Frank H. Hitchcock sat with friends in the grandstand. Col. Roosevelt, who came with Miss Ethel Roosevelt by motor from Oyster Bay, sat with Mrs. Thomas Hastings in the Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., box in Section 4 in the south grandstand. Miss Roosevelt joined some friends in Francis R. Hitchcock's box.

Postmaster General and Mrs. Hitchcock with the Rev. Dr. Percy Stickney Grant and Poultney Bigelow were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Ayrault Hazard in Section 2.

In the south grandstand Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney and Mrs. Lawrence Waterbury occupied front boxes. Mrs. Waterbury, who was gowned in white, became so interested at times during the game that she stood up and clapped her hands. Her guests were Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., and Miss Eleanora Sears. Mrs. Vanderbilt held a white bulldog in her arms during most of the game.

Mrs. Whitney Watches the Game.

Mrs. Whitney watched the game with great interest, and grew quite excited when Mr. Whitney made one of his daring strokes. The three Whitney children sat in a box next to their mother and they also became enthusiastic as the game proceeded. Mr. and Mrs. Payne Whitney occupied Box 2, in Section IV. with their children, and Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Morgan brought their children along.

Next to the E. D. Morgan box, in the south grand stand, were Mr. and Mrs. August Belmont, who had Col. and Mrs. William Jay with them. Just back of the August Belmont box Mr. and Mrs. August Belmont, Jr., entertained a party in their box, and near by were Mr. and Mrs. Arthur S. Burden, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Burden, Mr. and Mrs. W. Scott Cameron, Mr. and Mrs. T. Douglas Robinson, and Mr. and Mrs. John S. Phipps, all of whom entertained. Others occupying boxes close by were E. T. H. Talmage, W. P. Burden, C. Howard Brokaw, W. Ross Proctor, Joseph B. Thomas, T. A. Havemeyer, R. La Montagne, John D. Cheever, L. S. Thompson, L. E. Stoddard, Howard Phipps, John D. Westlewaite, E. F. Whitney, F. N. Watriss, and Malcolm Stevenson.

Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt in a blue and white costume sat with Mr. and Mrs. William Goadby Loew in their box in Section 4. Close by was Miss Dorothy Whitney, Mr. and Mrs. H. V. R. Kennedy and Miss Marion V. R. Kennedy, Mr. and Mrs. Middleton Burrill and Miss Burrill, Mrs. C. C. Rumsey, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Brooks, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Mortimer, who had Philip M. Lydig with them as their guest; Robert J. Collier, Mr. and Mrs. Bradley Martin, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Bull, and Mrs. E. N. Breitung, who entertained Miss Lota Robinson.

Other boxholders in this section included W. B. Cutting, Herbert Coppell, A. P. Clapp, James B. Taylor, W. J. Clothier, G. S. Mandell, Sherman R. Hall, Henry R. Rogers, George E. Kent, H. L. Pratt, J. E. Meyer, Robert Potter, Sidney J. Smith, W. R. Grace, and J. P. Grace.

Other Box Occupants and Guests.

Others who occupied boxes in the south grandstand were Mrs. H. B. Hollins, J. S. Stevens, James Park, J. R. Gladding, W. P. Rogers, Frederick H. Hatch, W. L. Goodwin, A. H. Sage, Charles H. Sabin, Moses Taylor, Mrs. C. I. Hudson, who had with her Mr. and Mrs. Hans Kierstede Hudson; H. Van Wagenen, F. M. Warburg, A. B. Maclay, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest E. Lorillard, S. Richardson, Seward Cary, Mr. and Mrs. Walter L. Goodwin, Howard W. Cram, Leonard Jacob, and Thomas F. White.

The north grandstand was just as crowded as its neighbor across the green stretch of turf. Mrs. E. H. Gary entertained Mrs. Lewis Nixon in box 1 of section one, and during the game, Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, who is entertaining a house party of some twenty-five at Brookholt, visited Mrs. Gary. With Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Gerry were Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth. Mrs. Longworth wore an orchid colored gown, with a black hat, trimmed with orchids. In the immediate section were Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Morgan, Jr., Miss Anna Sands, Mr. and Mrs. J. Watson Webb, Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Wilson, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Auerbach, and Miss Auerbach, Mr. and Mrs. George Crawford Clark, Miss Marian Clark, and Mr. and Mrs. David Crawford Clark.

Clarence H. Mackay occupied a box in this section. On Saturday night Mr. and Mrs. Mackay are giving a large dinner dance in honor of the British team. Near the Mackay box was Mr. and Mrs. Francis K. Pendleton, Gen. Lloyd Brice, Mr. and Mrs. De Lancey Nicoll, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Post, Jr., Louis C. Clark, Jr., Amory G. Hodges, Mr. and Mrs. Percy R. Pyne, H. S. Ladew, H. W. Slocum, L. F. H. Betts, J. C. Groome, W. H. Duces, and A. S. Cochrane.

Other boxholders in this section were Mrs. Thomas Hastings, Mr. and Mrs. Walter G. Oakman, Mrs. Garret B. Kip, James G. Blaine, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin F. Yoakum, Mr. and Mrs. William Woodward, W. G. Warden, W. N. Dykman, Henry Spies Kip, John B. Morris, W. Burling Cocks, and Henry B. McKean.

Coogan, 2d, Mr. and Mrs. John T. Pratt, Charles Steele, Mr. and Mrs. C. K. G. Billings, H. Hobart Porter, George S. Hoyt, Childs Frick, and Capt. D. S. McCarthy.

Townsend Irvin, Julien T. Davies, Mr. and Mrs. Adrian Iselin, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Goelet, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Talmage, W. C. Wallace, George T. Adee, O. G. Jennings, J. W. Converse, F. V. Burton, J. B. Huff, D. R. Hanna, and H. F. Gillette, all of whom entertained friends.

Section ten in the north grand stand was divided up into boxes for the friends of the British team and the four American champions. George Gould also had a box here, which was occupied by Anthony J. Drexel, Jr., and a party of friends. Capt. Lloyd, Cecil Grenfell, and Capt. Wilson were the other boxholders in this little side affair.

The boxes and seats on the roof of the club were only partially filled, the club members preferring to stand upon the broad piazza, which afforded a clean sweep of the field. Mrs. J. T. A. Clark was on the club roof with friends; also W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., Richard Delafield, the British Consul General, and guests; Gen. and Mrs. Wood, and Col. and Mrs. Treat.

Others who attended the game were Major Creighton Webb, Major Hunt, Miss Emily Dearborn Ayres, Fairfax Ayres, Miss Dorothy Taylor, Mrs. George Huhn, Mrs. Wylie, Maurice Heckscher, Horace S. White and Mrs. White, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Littleton, J. A. Rollins, H. L. Herbert, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Haight, Norman Dike, Mr. and Mrs. S. Thomas and Lady Elizabeth Cochrane of London, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Crocker, and Miss Chatfield-Taylor.

NEW LORIMER INQUIRY.

Senate Will Appoint a Committee of His Friends and Opponents.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 1.—After a long debate, in which most of the new Senators expressed the belief that they were better fitted for the reopening of the Lorimer investigation than the older Senators, the Senate this afternoon, by a vote of 48 to 20, rejected Mr. La Follette's resolution for investigation by a special committee of new Senators, and adopted instead the Democratic plan submitted by Minority Leader Martin of Virginia for investigation by the full Committee on Privileges and Elections.

While the Martin resolution on its face carries a full vote of confidence in the Elections Committee, it is accompanied with a private agreement with Chairman Dillingham of the committee that a report will be made to the Senate that an investigation by the full committee is not feasible, and asking for the appointment of a sub-committee of eight members—four of each party and four on each side of the question—to do the actual work of the investigation. This recommendation will be accepted by the Senate, the sub-committee clothed with full powers and the investigation will then begin.

as the latter is the owner of the securities, you can see that if the conduct of the subsidiary company was antagonistic—inimical—it would only be a question of time when the administration would be changed by the owner of the stocks."

Power of Steel Directors.

"The Directors in the United States Steel Company," asked Mr. Stanley, "have the power at any time they choose to exercise it to control the policies of any subsidiary company, have they not?"

"Well, they would have in time, perhaps; not for the moment, for the reason I have just given."

"They exercise a sort of power of recall of a stock ownership?" asked Mr. Stanley.

"They exercise the same power that the stockholders of any corporation exercise over the corporation. They may not do it for the day or the month, but when the election finally comes the stock owner owns the corporation."

The first question as to the subsidiary companies dealt with the American Bridge Company. Judge Gary said he was a Director in that corporation and that it was not now a competitive company. He referred to the small works of the Illinois Steel Company, which produced similar products, but not in quantity to make them of importance in a competitive sense. He said that the American Bridge Company had $60,000,000 of common and preferred stock and no bonds, and since the formation of the United States Steel Corporation its stock had been reduced.

The American Sheet and Tin Plate Company was then taken up, and Judge Gary said that he was a Director in that corporation, that it was not in competition with the other subsidiary companies in the trust or with others making a similar product. He informed the committee that he had a statement prepared showing the competition between the different companies which he would be glad to give the committee.

Mr. Stanley said that for the present it would save time to proceed with the investigation as it had begun, and asked the witness about the American Steel and Wire Company. That, too, was not, the witness said, competitive with the other subsidiary companies nor with any other companies in the same field of manufacture. To illustrate this he gave the figures showing that the American Steel and Wire Company had 77 per cent. of the wire rod business of the country and 68 per cent. of the wire nail business. He said that the company had $90,000,000 of stock, of which $40,000,000 was preferred and $50,000,000 common.

Distribution of Dividends.

Here occurred the colloquy given above as to the Carnegie Steel Company. Mr. Stanley asked as to the dividends, and Judge Gary said that the profits of the subsidiary companies were declared in the form of dividends and paid to the parent company, which was strictly a holding company. The profits of all the companies went into the treasury of the United States Steel Corporation, and that corporation distributed them as it saw fit. The subsidiary companies had no interest in the dividends after they were declared.

When Mr. Stanley asked what authority chooses the officials of the subsidiary companies, Judge Gary said that while the subsidiary companies selected their own officers, a suggestion from the parent company would be recognized.

In a general way, he said, he determined who should become Directors of the various subsidiary companies.

"There isn't any doubt," said Judge Gary, "that the Steel Corporation controls the conduct of the subsidiary companies."

In case where two companies manufacture the same product the sales prices were equal, Judge Gary said, all things being equal. Asked the price paid Andrew Carnegie for the Carnegie Steel Company, Mr. Gary said payment was made in the form of $303,450,000 in bonds, $98,277,120 in preferred stock, and $90,279,000 in common stock, all issued by the Steel Corporation.

The price, he said, included all of the Carnegie interests, including the H. C. Frick Coal and Coke Company, steamship and railroad companies, all properties, and natural gas companies.

The affairs of the Federal Steel Company were taken up by Mr. Stanley, and Judge Gary explained that the corporation was also a holding company, and with a jolly laugh said that he would like to say that the United States Steel Corporation was fashioned after the Federal company, which had been organized two and a half years before the other was.

"And so," observed Mr. Stanley, "you were the author of the plan, and not others, as we have all along believed?"

Judge Gary catalogued the component companies of the Federal Company. He said that the Illinois Steel Company, the Lorain Steel Company, and the Tennessee Iron and Steel Companies were competitive companies in one sense. He had difficulty in describing the extent of the Duluth & Iron Range Railroad when he was saying that it ran from Two Harbors, Minn., to Tower, Minn., the name of Tower for the moment escaping him. He turned to the committee and asked what the name was of the gentleman who was Ambassador at Vienna and later at Berlin.

Tennessee Company's Part.

The Tennessee Coal and Iron Company then came up, and the witness said that it had been an independent company. He paused and laughed at something he had in his mind, and then said that it was independent of all other companies as a corporation, but "decidedly dependent in making a livelihood," and then added quickly that probably he had no business to say that, and Mr. Stanley said that if he wished it should not go into the record.

Judge Gary said that the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company at the time of the merger had $32,929,997 common stock, $124,500,000 preferred stock, and $14,330,000 bonds, and that it owed now to the United States Steel Corporation $10,067,000, loaned.

When asked to furnish some information about the Union Steel Company, Judge Gary said:

"Mr. Chairman, I want to say that at any time we will send this committee any information on any subject. We will be glad to give facts and figures pertinent to this inquiry and regarding the holding company and its subsidiaries."

"The committee is hungry for facts," said Chairman Stanley.

"We will stand or fall on our record, whatever it is," said Judge Gary; and he added, softly, as if it was a most ordinary fact: "The Bureau of Corporations or the Department of Commerce and Labor has for six years been investigating our business."

Every member of the committee sat up and took notice. There was a craning of necks all over the room to hear what was coming next.

"The bureau," went on Judge Gary, "has been going over our books and has secured a mass of documents. It has cost us, I may say, hundreds of thousands of dollars to assist the bureau in its search."

"Do you mean to say," said Mr. Stanley, "that for six years the Bureau of Corporations has been going over your books and that no part of the information thus gained has been furnished to the present President of the United States or to a former President?"

Mr. Lindebury benevolently suggested that this was not a proper question to put to the witness, who could not be in a position to know what the Bureau of Corporations had done in the way of furnishing information to a President of the United States.

Mr. Stanley waved the objection aside with the injunction that if counsel desired to make an objection or to ask a question it should be put in writing in compliance with the rule of the committee upon that matter.

"If the committee will allow me, and if my counsel will allow me," said Judge Gary, "I will say that I have no knowledge whether or not the Department of Commerce has furnished any information to the President. It has been a long and tedious task. It is not completed, but I am advised that the report will soon be made to the President—within the next few months at any rate. I do not know whether or not from time to time information has been furnished to the President. It will be remembered that when I appeared two years ago before the Ways and Means Committee there was furnished that committee much information in regard to our business from the Department of Commerce and Labor."

Mr. Stanley called the witness' attention to published statements in the newspapers of an interview with Judge Gary, in which he was reported to have said that the Attorney General had investigated the Steel Trust, and had given it a clean bill of health.

"I never made that statement," replied Judge Gary. "It isn't true. I could not in truth make any such statement."

Here came the most startling incident of the day. Mr. Stanley asked Judge Gary if he belonged to the American Steel Institute. He answered that he was President of it. He said the members were not corporations but individuals. The purpose of the institute was to collect and disseminate information concerning economic and ethical questions in which iron and steel makers are interested.

"Is it industrial or social?" asked Stanley.

"Oh, I see you refer to what have been called the Gary dinners," responded Judge Gary.

"I have heard that those dinners possess such a charm that I am almost persuaded to wish I were a steel man that I might share in their pleasure," observed Mr. Stanley.

"I shall be very glad," said Judge Gary, "to send you a copy of the speeches made at the institute dinners. I am aware that it has been suggested that at these dinners agreements are made as to prices on commodities. I asure you that the contrary of that is true."

To questions Judge Gary said that the press generally was not admitted to the dinners of the institute, but that the trade papers had representatives present.

Scope of Steel Institute.

"Is this institute in any degree international in its operation?" asked Mr. Stanley.

"It is not."

"Have you ever sought to make it international in its operation?"

"No. I have not, and yet I would be very glad to tell you what I have advocated in that direction, what I hope for, and what I am intending to do."

"Well in that connection, Judge," said Mr. Stanley, "I have heard, and only hear it from reading these papers, trade journals, for some time, that the ultimate purpose of these institutes was to reach an amicable agreement among the eminent gentlemen who were engaged in the iron and steel business in this and various foreign countries, so that there might be what they considered a legitimate and a necessary steadying of prices in the rest of the world similar to that steadiness which we now witness in prices in this country. And I will be perfectly frank with you to say that one of the moving causes why I introduced this resolution and under which we are operating was a dread—whether well-founded or not will remain to be seen from the investigation of this committee—that within ninety days perhaps, this institute, or some institute, would have come to such an agreement.

"I have heard it intimated that such an agreement became peremptorily necessary on account of the fact that the Federal Government was especially active in order to prevent agreements of that kind in this country, and because the Federal Congress was liable to alter tariff schedules, both of which unsteadying influences on prices could only be met and adequately adjusted by an organization international in its operation, and I wish to call your attention to an editorial published in The Iron Monger, on May 13, 1911.

"This is an editorial and I will give you a copy of this editorial that you may look at it very carefully, and when the meeting is called together you may please explain to the committee all you know about this, and we would like to have you state as to the accuracy of the charge made there that this international trade agreement for fixing prices of rail and armor plate and things of that kind, throughout the world, is due especially to the activities and the able management of the Chairman of the Board of Directors of the United States Steel Corporation?"

Judge Gary was manifestly surprised at the Chairman's action. His face flushed, and he sat with his lips parted as if he were anxious to speak, and waiting for the words that did not come. Mr. Stanley declared the committee meeting adjourned.

"May I say just one word before you adjourn?" asked Judge Gary.

"Why, certainly," said Stanley, smiling.

"The statement of the Chairman is unusually frank, and certainly entitles the Chairman to the respect of the one who happens to be upon the witness stand. The question will be met in exactly the same spirit, and I will give you the facts, and all the facts in relation to the subject matter of your inquiry, and I only wish you had come to my office before, and I would have given you the facts to satisfy you, I believe—to satisfy you, that you have been laboring under a misapprehension with respect to the real object which is sought to be accomplished, and with respect to the question of danger or otherwise."

"I certainly appreciate the hospitality of the witness," replied Stanley, "and his very courteous statement, and I am glad that in this case the 'mountain has come to Mahomet'; I could not go to New York, and you have been good enough to come here."

Mr. Stanley reached over and handed to the witness a typewritten copy of The Iron Monger article, the title of which was "The International Iron and Steel Association." The article was not read, but THE TIMES correspondent obtained a copy of it later. Here it is:

"In The New York Iron Age of Feb. 23 there appeared the following paragraph:

An international meeting of iron and steel manufacturers, similar to that held in New York in October, 1910, will be held in Brussels, Belgium, beginning July 5, 1911. A delegation of steel manufacturers representing the American Iron and Steel Institute will attend. It is expected that the iron and steel interests of Great Britain, Germany, France, Belgium, Austria-Hungary, Italy, Spain, and Russia will also be represented. The organization which is now being formed will be known as the International Iron and Steel Institute.

"The true purpose of Judge Gary's extraordinary proposal, we believe, is the formation of what is primarily intended to be a business organization, a sort of holy alliance of all the steel trusts of the world for the purpose of what is euphonistically called the steadying of prices.

"The report of the proceedings at the farewell luncheon given by Judge Gary to the European ironmasters on the eve of their return from their visit to the American Iron and Steel Institute affords interesting reading. It was on that occasion that Judge Gary first unbosomed himself about the 'international' institute. He began by drawing a touching picture of the 'neighborliness' of the American steel magnates. They were working in harmony, he said; they were trying to help one another; they had a feeling of affectionate esteem and friendship for each other. Unfortunately the American was made the attainment of ideal conditions, from Judge Gary's point of view, difficult. 'We have to be very particular what we say and what we do. We cannot enter into contracts with each other which tend to restrict trade,' and so forth. But no law, said the Judge, could compel men to compete, and from what we gather the American Iron and Steel Institute was devised to collect and exchange information which would have the effect of preventing competition.

"To extend such conditions to the iron and steel trade of the whole world was Judge Gary's object, and he accordingly proposed the Brussels meeting because Belgium was 'neutral ground' and Brussels was a pretty place to meet in. The reference to Belgium as a neutral ground is a little obscure. We believe the Belgium competition is now unknown in the markets of the world. But, however this may be, the Judge's speech was followed by a discussion in which the principal foreign guests gave their views.

Foreign Guests' Attitude.

"The British visitors spoke mainly on behalf of the rail manufacturers, and were judiciously sympathetic. The managers of the German, French, and Austrian steel trusts, while equally guarded in their remarks, promised to lay the matter before their several organizations, and in the end it was decided to appoint committees in each country. The committees are likely to be pretty large, for, as Judge Gary observed, 'We must be very careful not to neglect any particular industry or line.' The resolution which was carried as the outcome of the discussion was as follows:

With a view of forming an international association to extend existing friendly relations between steel producers throughout the world, and to provide for conferences in relation to matters in which they are all interested, it is recommended by the gentlemen here assembled that a committee be pointed from nominations made by them tries to consider the subject and report to a meeting to be held in Europe in 1911. The committee shall be made up of representatives of the different countries to be appointd from nominations made by them respectively. The objects to be attained are not intended to conflict with the provisions of existing iron and steel institutes or technical societies already organized.

"With that they wished each other Auf Wiedersehen in Brussels. The July conference will no doubt show what progress has been made and how the European manufacturing interests regard the matter. On its face it looks suspiciously like an astute move on the part of the American Steel Trust. Judge Gary probably sees ahead in his own country vast political and economic changes which will not make for the comfort of the American Steel Corporation, and may possibly in some measure expose it to foreign competition in its home market.

"The anti-trust campaign in the United States, which has hung fire so long, now seems likely to achieve comparative success. The Congressional Committee at Washington, it would appear, is about to investigate seriously the working of the United States Steel Corporation, and the bulky indictment of the Trust which is now before it is reported to contain some strong charges of restraint of trade and destruction of competition. The charges may not be substantiated and the investigation may come to nothing. But the present does not appear to be a very appropriate time for European manufacturers to ally themselves more closely with the gigantic concern across the ocean."

GARY COURTED AN INQUIRY.

Offered His Books to the Government When Other Corporations Resisted.

The testimony of Judge Gary before the Congressional Committee investigating trust law, the United States Steel Corporation recalls the story of an unexpected call he made upon James R. Garfield in Washington some seven or eight years ago. At that time Mr. Garfield was Secretary of the newly organized Department of Commerce and Labor, which had announced its programme of investigating certain large corporations.

At once a storm of protest went up all over the country, to the effect that the department would be resisted to the last ditch if it attempted to lay bare the "private business affairs" of large industrial enterprises. Threats were made that resistance would be carried to the Supreme Court in order to have the act creating the department declared unconstitutional. Denunciation of the plan came from every point of the business compass save one—that wherein was located the headquarters of the United States Steel Corporation.

While the storm of protest was still raging, it is related, Judge Gary went across to Jersey City, hopped on a train, stepped off at Washington, and went directly to the office of Secretary Garfield.

"Mr. Secretary," said Judge Gary, "I am here to tell you that you will need no court orders or other proceedings in order to investigate the United States Steel Corporation. Our books, our contracts, our plants all over the country are open to you or your authorized representatives. United States Steel has nothing to conceal. Instead of opposing, we would welcome an honest and thorough investigation, because it will show that instead of being in any way a menace to the country, the United States Steel Corporation is one of the great National assets belonging to the American People."

Then Judge Gary said good-bye, turned around and started back for New York. From that day to this he has steadily maintained the attitude that the Steel Corporation is such an important industrial concern that the people of the country have a right to know about it.

AGAINST A TRUST CRUSADE.

Guilty Officials, However, Need Not Hope to Escape Wickersham.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 1.—Senator Pomerene of Ohio to-day supplemented the resolution he introduced in the Senate some time ago asking the Attorney General about criminal prosecutions of the individual defendants in the Standard Oil case by introducing a joint resolution directing the Attorney General to bring prosecutions against such individual defendants in the oil and tobacco cases as in his judgment are criminally liable. There is no prospect of any action on the resolution, and as it stands it simply represents the idea of the Ohio statesman.

It may be said authoritatively that it is not necessary to give the Attorney General any such Congressional direction in order to bring about criminal prosecutions of individuals connected with concerns which Mr. Wickersham believes he can convict of violating the Anti-Trust act.

It should be kept in mind, however, that there never has been, and is not now, the slightest intention on the part of the President or Mr. Wickersham of engaging in a general crusade and prosecuting anybody on mere suspicion. The "rule of reason" about which so much has been heard in the oil and tobacco decisions is to obtain just as much in determining the activities of the Department of Justice as it has in the Supreme Court.

But it is none the less the fact that the editorial warning of THE NEW YORK TIMES to all whom it may concern to set their business in order and get out of the way of Mr. Wickersham's Anti-Trust act firearm is exceedingly well founded.

The list of prosecutions now pending in court is sufficiently long to be of much interest to all those whose business methods lay them liable to investigation under the Anti-Trust act. Most of the pending cases are civil suits, and hold out no threat of prison to those most concerned. But several of the more important of them are on the criminal count and aimed at individuals.

The most important of these are the three cases against dealers in the meat—commonly called the Beef Trust cases. J. Ogden Armour, Louis F. Swift, Edward F. Swift, Charles H. Swift, Edward Tilden, Arthur Meeker, Francis A. Fowler, Edward Morris, Thomas J. Connors, and Louis H. Heyman are now facing trial in Chicago on criminal indictments charging them with violating the anti-

¶ Was clothed with a mission of the highest sartorial importance. He was a sort of plenipotentiary extraordinary to the High Court of Style, his official duties consisting of selecting for those New Yorkers who like them an assortment of London-made clothes.

¶ It was his second trip for the Spring season, for, as leaders in the realm of clothes, we must have constant representation there where fashions most do congregate.

¶ And not only has our plenipotentiary extraordinary sent you the latest conceits from the High Court of Style, but upon his return a day or two ago, he advised us that many other choice English fabrics and designs, such as were pleasing to his practised eye, are due to arrive at an early date.

¶ Moreover, in order to insure you against any possible disappointment resulting from delay, he protracted his stay in England until the last moment in order to expedite as much as possible the forthcoming deliveries referred to.

¶ And, incidentally, such of these English clothes as are at hand to date are more truly representative of English styles than is usually implied by the loose usage of that term.

SAT ON THE BELLIGERENT.

Quarrelsome Passenger on a Train Finally Suppressed by Volunteers.

In the smoking car of the Western train arriving over the Central Railroad of New Jersey in the Communipaw station at 7 o'clock last night six men sat upon the prostrate form of another man, who voiced vigorously his objection to their method of procedure. The man at the bottom of the group was Vitalino Leterto of 126 Mulberry Street.

Leterto, with other passengers, among whom was Joseph Goldenberg of 217 Hunterdon Street, Newark, boarded the train at Easton, Penn. When the train got to Phillipsburg both men were in a wordy war, while the other occupants of the smoking car kept advising them to "shut up."

As the train left Elizabeth the Italian pulled a revolver and began to tell Goldenberg what he intended to do to him. This was too much for the long-suffering passengers. They arose and threw themselves upon Leterto. After taking his revolver away from him, a committee was appointed to sit upon him until the train reached Communipaw. There he was turned over to the police, and upon Goldenberg's complaint locked up charged with carrying concealed weapons.

HOUSE DEMOCRATS ADOPT WOOL BILL

Declare, However, That the Party Policy for Free Raw Product Is Not Abandoned.

ALL ANXIOUS FOR HARMONY

Debate Is Sharp, but Expected Split Does Not Come—Text of the Underwood Bill Out.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Friday, June 2.—By vote the House Democratic caucus shortly after midnight indorsed the Underwood bill, which will greatly lower duties under the wool tariff. The 20 per cent. duty on raw wool to which William J. Bryan had objected was left in, but a resolution was adopted which declared that this duty was levied only as a revenue measure because Republican extravagance had made necessary a large income for the Government.

This resolution was drafted at a conference in which Speaker Clark and Representatives James of Kentucky, Burleson of Texas, Fitzgerald of New York and Kitchin of North Carolina participated. It said that the support of a duty on raw wool should not be construed as an abandonment of the Democratic policy of free wool. Speaker Clark took the floor and advocated its adoption, pointing out that under it the party could insist on free raw wool at any time in the future. It was adopted with few dissenting, and the bill was soon made a party measure.

Though the final vote was made unanimous these members were excused from a pledge to support the caucus action: Representatives Rucker, Colorado; Ashbrook, Francis, and Sharp, Ohio, and Gray Indiana.

This example of party cohesion and self-possession came at a juncture when there have been predictions on all sides and most gleefully from Republicans that Champ Clark's policy had failed, and that the attempts of Mr. Bryan to dictate a policy for the party in Congress would break up all alignments for 1912.

When the caucus met copies of the bill were distributed. It was printed, paragraph by paragraph, with an analysis of each item in the schedule showing the present amount of imports and those estimated, the amount of duty now and proposed, with comparisons with the Wilson tariff, and those proposed by the Springer and Mills bills. Mr. Underwood went over the bill most carefully.

Chairman Underwood came out of the caucus late in the evening to reply to an attack at St. Paul to-day by W. J. Bryan, in which he charges that an effort was being made to "betray the Democratic Party into the hands of the protectionists."

"I never bolted a caucus or scratched a ticket," said Mr. Underwood. "I am willing to stand on my record in Congress on the tariff, and defy any one to find it inconsistent. I have always voted in any tariff legislation for the lowest duties, and if that is protection, Mr. Bryan is welcome to make the most of it. I was first elected to Congress as a Cleveland Democrat and on a platform which advocated tariff for revenue. I have kept the same position, and voted, as did Mr. Bryan, for the Wilson bill, which was a tariff-for-revenue measure."

Asked what effect Mr. Bryan's attitude would have on the wool bill, Mr. Underwood pointed to the House chamber where the Democrats were in caucus and said:

"Mr. Bryan will get his answer in there in a few minutes."

ADVERTISEMENT.

What is Advertising?

WHEN a man begins seriously to investigate advertising he gets some rude shocks.

He finds that most of the things he thought about advertising are not so.

He finds that inserting an advertisement, or any number of advertisements, in magazines—and stopping there—never paid and never will pay.

That such advertisements are not advertising.

He finds that real advertising is merely another term for the new science of business efficiency applied to the selling end of a business.

That its function is to reduce the time and cost of creating CUSTOMERS.

That in place of the old, piecemeal, unscientific selling methods, it deals directly with the great currents of consuming demand.

That—note this well—it sees to it that this demand is surely and completely supplied.

That in accomplishing sales the printed advertisement is only part of the operation:

That behind the printed advertisement must be the systematic and unimpeded distribution—the smooth and economical correllation of each part of the selling machine—the understanding and control of that machine without which its highest efficiency is lost. These hold no secondary place in the science of advertising.

When the serious investigator of advertising has reached this point he begins to see why so many other conservative investigators have gone into advertising deliberately, unequivocally and with such far-reaching results.

He begins to see that sound advertising is one of the most truly conservative influences in modern business.

He begins to see that sound advertising is but the ancient and beautiful virtue of Common-sense applied in a new way.

He finds, when he has learned these things, that the most serious obstacles to advertising his own business have disappeared.

To the manufacturer who feels interested in this view of advertising we should like to send gratis our 40-page booklet on Modern Merchandising.

JOHNSON APPOINTED FIRE COMMISSIONER

O'Keeffe's Selection as First Police Deputy Is Now Expected.

WALDO PRAISES SUCCESSOR

Who Says the Department Will Run Along as New Police Head Planned —The Great Oak's Career.

Joseph Johnson, Jr., the Great Oak of the Order of Acorns, who served under Rhinelander Waldo as Deputy Fire Commissioner, was appointed Fire Commissioner yesterday. The appointment was announced by Mayor Gaynor at City Hall early in the afternoon, and the new Fire Commissioner was very busy for the remainder of the day, receiving congratulations.

His appointment marked the end of a spirited rivalry between Mr. Johnson and Arthur J. O'Keeffe, also a Deputy Fire Commissioner, for the job of Fire Commissioner. Mr. O'Keeffe, who had been slated for the First Deputy Police Commissioner, objected to being transferred to the Police Department, it was reported, and wanted the appointment as Fire Commissioner. In view of the Mayor's selection of Mr. Johnson, it is likely that Mr. O'Keeffe's appointment as First Deputy Police Commissioner will be announced soon. Mr. O'Keeffe was one of the first to congratulate Mr. Johnson on his appointment, and Mr. Johnson said afterward that, in spite of the rivalry, he and Mr. O'Keeffe were still the best of friends.

As a Deputy Fire Commissioner Mr. Johnson won the approbation of Mayor Gaynor, especially because of the manner in which he handled the Bureau of Supplies and Repairs. This bureau was under the supervision of Mr. Johnson for about a year and a half. Owing to his economical administraeion, the bureau turned back $100,000 to the City Treasury last year, out of an appropriation of $800,000.

"The selection of Mr. Johnson for the Fire Commissionership was excellent," said Police Commissioner Waldo. "He has done good work already in the Fire Department, and I am sure he will continue to do good work as head of the department.

Mr. Johnson's policy as Fire Commissioner will be to carry out the plan of administration worked out by Mr. Waldo. "Mr. Waldo left the department in excellent shape," said the new Commissioner. "In fact, he has reorganized every branch of the department so well that I believe there is little else for me than to continue his excellent work.

"No changes in the department are being contemplated just now. The automobile apparatus is about the most important question just now in the department. It is my intention ultimately to abandon practically all the horses and have auto apparatus installed instead. In fact, the auto apparatus for the hose wagons is now being installed as rapidly as possible, while the pumping engines are still in an experimental stage."

Mr. Johnson was appointed as Deputy Fire Commissioner on Jan. 21, 1910. In the campaign of 1909 he worked hard for the Tammany ticket and, through his political organization, the Order of Acorns, swung many votes for Mayor Gaynor. Back in 1901 Mr. Johnson, then a newspaper man, attained some prominence by organizing the Order of Acorns, which was ostensibly a non-partisan organization. He was elected Great Oak, which is the order's equivalent to President.

The Order of Acorns took an active part in the campaign which elected Seth Low Mayor, and William Travers Jerome District Attorney. In the campaign of 1905 the Order of Acorns supported George B. McClellan for Mayor, and after the election Great Oak Johnson was appointed as expert accountant in the Finance Department, where he served through the entire regime of Controller Metz. During the last National campaign it was reported that Johnson and his Order of Acorns were behind the Taft-Chanler League, but this was vigorously denied by several of the Oaks.

In the campaign of the following year Johnson was said to have been one of the prime movers in an organization which erected a statue they called "Miss Purity" in Times Square. It was put there as a defiance of those who were termed by Tammany Hall "slanderers of the city." Great Oak Johnson also opened what he termed the "Acorn Musee," in Union Square, in opposition to the "Chamber of Horrors," run by the Committee of One Hundred.

Mr. Johnson, who is 40 years old, was born in Griffin, Ga., just below Atlanta. He studied at St. Mary's College in North Carolina, and was graduated as first honor man there. He continued his studies at the University of Alabama, and when 20 years old began teaching elocution at the National Normal University at Lebanon, Ohio.

Mr. Johnson soon grew tired of teaching. He went to Atlanta, Ga., and started in as a reporter on Hoke Smith's newspaper, The Atlanta Journal, afterward becoming city editor. While in Atlanta Johnson became a close friend of Robert Adamson, Secretary to Mayor Gaynor, who was then city editor of The Atlanta Constitution. They are still warm friends. Mr. Johnson came here several years ago and worked four years for one of the William R. Hearst newspapers.

One of Mr. Johnson's most interesting experiences here was as Superintendent of what was known as Bishop Potter's Subway Tavern—a so-called temperance saloon in Bleeker Street near Mulberry. The tavern was modeled after those which are operated by the Public Trust Corporation in England. The Subway Tavern ran a year and a half.

Mr. Johnson married Miss Harriett Malsby of Atlanta several years ago. They have two children, both girls, one 6 and the other 7.

MINISTERS AS AGENTS FOR PLASS SHARES

Churchgoing People Induced to Invest $2,000,000, for Which Three Promoters Are on Trial.

MANY INVESTORS ARE WOMEN

Friends of Former President of Washburn College Tell at Trial of Placing Thousands at His Disposal.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., June 1.—During the trial to-day of the Rev. Norman Plass, Charles H. Brooks, and John I. Trahegan, formerly of the Redeemable Investment Company, facts were brought out showing that the promoters of the company made a special effort to induce clergymen and church people to invest in the securities of the company.

It is charged by the Government that the defendants conspired to defraud their customers. It has been estimated that the company sold $2,000,000 of its stock and bonds.

The Rev. J. Spencer Vorhees, formerly pastor of a church at North Adams, was a selling agent of the company, and District Attorney French sought to introduce a bundle of letters, while the clergyman was on the stand, which it was said would throw a flood of light on the manner in which the company caught its victims.

Attorney Elder, counsel for the defendants, objected to the introduction at this time of the letters, thirty-two in number, and Judge Dodge ordered that they be marked for identification and given to Mr. Elder to read. Judge Dodge will pass upon their admissibility as evidence later.

Some of the letters showed that Vorhees was to be given a drawing account of $100 a month, which was to be deducted from his commission of 10 per cent. At the end of six months, if his commissions had not amounted to $600, the guarantee was to be withdrawn. He said he sold in all about $1,000 worth of stock for the Redeemable. It did not prove an attractive stock in his territory.

Mrs. Horace A. Babbitt of Adams, Mass., testified that she bought $2,000 worth of the stock, 200 shares. A letter from her asking the company for interest on the stock was read, together with Brooks's reply that the interest was not yet due.

Miss F. Annette Sunier, who was head of the department of romance languages at Washburn College, Topeka, when Dr. Plass was President of the institution, said she invested $3,500 in Dr. Plass's company and induced her mother to invest $6,000.

Assistant District Attorney Garland asked: "I assume that you are a close friend of Dr. Plass?"

"I certainly am," said Miss Sunier.

Morgan Liner Struck a Schooner.

The schooner Margaret B. Roper, from San Domingo City, came into port yesterday morning, after a narrow escape from being sent to the bottom twenty-five miles south of Sandy Hook. She was coming through the fog Wednesday afternoon when the Morgan liner Momus, bound for New Orleans with passengers, slipped out of the fog and came down upon her without warning. The steamer's pow cut off one of the smaller craft's stern boats and carried away the yawl. The Roper's mizzentopmast snapped off at the cap. The Momus, apparently unscathed, disappeared in the fog.

INTERIOR DECORATION
Shall We "Harmonize" Your Home?

Before furnishing a new house or refurnishing an old one, visit our Department of Interior Decoration and consult with our expert on color schemes and furnishings. His ability to advise you is the result of years of experiment and experience.

A refining "atmosphere" does not necessarily involve much expenditure. Good color combinations and artistic furnishings, if rightly chosen, may be quite inexpensive.

Macy's has established a reputation for many things in general and for house and home furnishing in particular.

If necessary, we will design plans for your guidance.

Even if you have bought your "things" here already without taking advantage of the privilege we offer, it is not too late.

The success of your decorative scheme is still a matter of interest to us.

More than that—it is still our responsibility.

We await instructions.

PURE SUMMER BEVERAGES 5th Fl.
A Warning from Macy's Grocery Department

The consequences of impure food are greater in summer than in winter.

Only a store having its own source of production can guarantee the vital essential.

Over on the far west side of 35th St. is Macy's own Laboratory.

Teas, Coffees, Candies, Baking Powder, Preserves, Drugs, Perfumes—we make them all.

100,000 square feet of beneficial activity.

We wish every tea and coffee drinker could go to the Macy Laboratory to see the DIRT extracted from raw tea and coffee.

When you buy tea and coffee from Macy's you have the guarantee that all that DIRT is out.

When you buy tea from Macy's you buy TEA LEAVES—and not TEA DUST.

Hence the UNIFORM quality.

When you buy coffee from Macy's you are sure of getting the selected cofee bean.

The intricate machinery we employ, which graduates the raw green bean to its ultimate marketable condition, automatically rejects the "undesirable," whose presence in coffees not subjected to the same "discriminating" process is betrayed by a peculiarly nauseous taste.

ALL MACY'S TEAS AND COFFEES GO THROUGH UNIFORM PROCESSES

There is no lessening of zeal and precaution because the price is less.

Measure the economy of teas and coffees at Macy's by the number of CUPS per POUND.

A careful system of placing in the box—not "packing"—avoids the usual evaporation and deterioration which makes most teas and coffees so costly.

Strength—Flavor—Fragrance—all reach you unimpaired.

That is the difference between even the lowest priced teas and coffees at Macy's and some of the highest priced teas and coffees sold by stores which act as mere agents and know nothing of how those teas and coffees have been treated.

There is neither dust nor dirt in a Macy air-tight tea package.

Only TEA LEAF.

Coffee at Macy's, whether in the bean, granulated, or pulverized, is good, pure coffee—even the lowest priced.

DIX APPOINTS CRAM TO UTILITIES BOARD

"I Alone am Responsible," Says the Governor, in Naming Commissioner Bassett's Successor.

MURPHY'S FORMER FRIEND

They Don't Speak, but Tammany Leader Won't Oppose Him—Grady Attacks Public Service Commission.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, June 1.—Gov. Dix sent to the Senate to-day the nomination of J. Sergeant Cram to be a member of the Public Service Commission for the First District in place of Edward M. Bassett of Brooklyn, whose term expired last February.

The Governor's action was not altogether unexpected. For some days it has been understood at the Capitol that Tammany Leader Murphy's former social mentor would draw this prize. But there was some speculation among the Senators as to how Mr. Murphy would feel about the nomination of Mr. Cram.

Soon after the nomination of Mr. Cram had reached the Senate, however, it was stated on good authority that the appointment would not be displeasing either to the organization or to Mr. Murphy.

When the nomination was made, Gov. Dix gave out an official statement in which he warmly eulogized Mr. Cram and claimed credit for the appointment as a personal one for which "I alone am responsible." The Governor's statement follows:

> I know Mr. Cram to be a man of unusual force and ability and of demonstrated courage and independence. He is a man who accomplishes results, the kind of man the New York City rapid transit situation needs at the present time. For these reasons, I have named Mr. Cram for Public Service Commissioner.
>
> Another reason is that I desire to have on the First District Commission at least one member I personally know, and who will be a part of my administration. I have been greatly impressed by the lack of practical results from the long and expensive tenure of the First District Public Service Commission. The commission appears to lack virility and the quality that overcomes obstacles and brings things to pass. Rapid transit conditions in New York City are deplorable. The people are entitled to immediate relief, and I shall aid them all I can.
> I believe Mr. Cram understands, as few men do, the rapid transit needs of New York City; that he has complete knowledge of the details of the rapid transit problem, and will treat the question from the viewpoint of the entire municipality. He is a man of broad mind and progressive ideas, and I expect great things from him, and am confident he will make good. I alone am responsible for Mr. Cram's appointment.

In vetoing Senator O'Brien's bill reducing the fare on certain railroads between Flatbush Avenue, Brooklyn, and Jamaica, in Kings County, to 5 cents, Gov. Dix declared that the "regulation of public service corporations by the Public Service Commission is an established and permanent feature of our State Government."

There was considerable comment when that part of the Governor's message was read in the Senate to-day. Senator Hinman congratulated Gov. Dix on the sentiment, and Senator Grady followed with an attack on the Public Service Commission, and John N. Carlisle, who, as the Governor's Commissioner, praised the work of that commission.

"Does the Senator know," interrupted Minority Leader Brackett, "that the New York Public Service Commission has received a clean bill of health from that eminent Democrat, John N. Carlisle?"

"Oh, yes!" Senator Grady flashed back. "And I wish to say that that opinion will stand as a monument to his charity as long as it is read. The Public Service Commission is most accommodating. When a company wanted to compete with the lighting monopoly in New York City the commission refused to give it permission, saying it was easier to watch one corporation than two. I regret our Governor thinks it is to be a permanent institution.

J. Sergeant Cram was at his country place at Westbury, L. I., and could not be reached last night. Yesterday Mr. and Mrs. Cram had as guest at the international polo match Mrs. John A. Dix, wife of the Governor. Mrs. Dix was to have been the guest of August Belmont, but the recent injury which Mr. Belmont sustained when he was thrown from a pony while playing polo precluded this. It was then arranged that Mr. and Mrs. Cram should entertain the wife of the Governor and her party.

It was learned yesterday that Gov. Dix offered the place of Public Service Commissioner to succeed Mr. Bassett when the fight was on over the election of a United States Senator. Mr. Cram demurred at that time, saying that he preferred to await the result of the struggle over the Senatorship. Previous to that Mr. Cram had stated that should William F. Sheehan be elected Senator he would resign as Chairman of the Tammany General Committee. Charles F. Murphy has known all along of Gov. Dix's offer to Mr. Cram, and when asked if the appointment would be objectionable to him, he replied:

"Not in the slightest degree."

More than a week ago Gov. Dix renewed his offer, and Mr. Cram said that he would acept it.

MAY CAUSE SUBWAY DELAY.

Conferrees Worried by Cram's Appointment to Succeed Bassett.

The appointment of J. Sergeant Cram threw yesterday's subway conference between the McAneny committee of the Board of Estimate and the Public Service Commission into considerable confusion. News of it reached the conference room via City Hall shortly after the commission and the committee had gone into session over the draft of report which the Chairman of the Board of Estimate committee prepared during his stay at Lake George over Decoration Day. The discussion of the report terminated and for the rest of the session the discussion had to do with the political significance of the appointment at this stage of the subway situation.

While none of the conferrees would discuss the matter after the gathering adjourned, it was learned that several of them expressed the opinion that the appointment of Mr. Cram was a move influenced by friends of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company in the hope of staving off action on the McAneny committee's report, which, it is now generally understood, will be in favor of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company's proposal. Members of the conference expressed their views privately in forcible language after the session adjourned, and declared that no further element of delay in coming to a final conclusion on the McAneny report would be allowed because of the new situation.

There will be other conferences to-day, to-morrow, and Monday, and the McAneny report will be made public either Monday night or Tuesday, so as to go to the Board of Estimate at its meeting next week. One member of the Public Service Commission, after yesterday's session, read the interview which Gov. Dix gave out in Albany in connection with the appointment of Mr. Cram, and then called attention to part of the report rendered to the Governor on Monday of this week by John N. Carlisle, the special investigator, whom the Governor appointed to look into the operation of the Public Service Commission of this district. In that report Mr. Carlisle said:

> Any attempt at this time, when its work (on subways) has progressed so far, to change the personnel of the commission would result in further delay in subway construction, and I do not believe that it would be tolerated by the people of New York, who are so greatly in need of additional facilities.

Aside from the present situation, members of the joint transit conference declared that they considered the appointment as most unfortunate. There are several phases of the subway situation requiring intimate and detailed study, which must be canvassed in the framing of any contracts, that were given specially into the care of Commissioner Bassett by the city's transit conferrees, and when the stage of framing contracts arrives, it is apprehended that a good deal of embarrassment will be experienced in breaking in another member of the conference.

O'GORMAN AT ALBANY CONDEMNS RECALL

Tells Legislators That Applied to Judges It Is an Impeachment and Subversive of Law.

FATAL TO JUDICIAL COURAGE

Repeats His Approval of Reciprocity and Direct Vote, but Silent on Income Tax and Primaries.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, June 1.—With blunt but winning frankness United States Senator James A. O'Gorman, in an address to-day before the Legislature, outlined his views on some important questions pending before Congress. Unlike William R. Hearst and William Jennings Bryan, who within the last three weeks have delivered similar addresses to the Legislature, Senator O'Gorman did not undertake to lecture the members on matters with which they will duly be called upon to deal.

Senator O'Gorman was warmly greeted in the Assembly chamber, where he had been preceded by the Senate in a body shortly after noon. He was escorted to the Speaker's rostrum by President Pro Tem Wagner of the Senate, who had met the Senator at the railroad station and escorted him to the Capitol in a touring car. He was presented to the Legislature and the spectators who crowded the chamber by Lieut. Gov. Conway.

After expressing his thanks to the legislators for electing him and inviting him to address them Senator O'Gorman took up the legislative programme before the new Congress, declaring himself in favor of Canadian reciprocity and the direct election of United States Senators by popular vote. He said in part:

"The Canadian Reciprocity bill has passed the House and is now before the Finance Committee of the Senate. The bill is designed to promote free and untrammeled commercial intercourse between our country and Canada. Its purpose is to remove the barrier extending along the boundary line for more than 3,000 miles from east to west which has heretofore been an obstacle to the development of our trade relations.

"The President is strong in his advocacy of the measure and, it is believed, will find sufficient support to secure its enactment. Personally, I favor the measure and shall vote for it. [Applause.]

After declaring in favor of the popular election of United States Senators, Senator O'Gorman proceeded:

"I know the people of this State are keenly interested in another measure which nominally affects only the people of a distant section of the country. I refer to the Arizona Statehood bill.

"The feature of the Arizona Constitution that has aroused opposition and provoked discussion is the section providing for the recall of Judges. In substance it is provided that after a public officer, whether he be a Judge or other official, has held office for six months, a new election may be ordered on the petition of 25 per cent. of the voters participating in the last general election.

"I am unalterably opposed to the recall of Judges. Under such a system it is difficult to conceive of a lawyer of ability and character being willing to accept a Judgeship. The new election is practically an impeachment trial, not conducted in an orderly manner, before a responsible, deliberate judicial body where the rights of the official may be safeguarded. It is a trial before the people, who will attempt to pass upon a Judge's conduct—perhaps in a case where he may have rendered a just but unpopular decision. The people will be unfamiliar with the law, and the facts involved in the litigation, which may provoke the outbreak. A more intolerable judicial system cannot be imagined. It is subversive of every principle of a government of laws. If a Judge's ruling should become unpopular, his continuance as a Judge may be submitted to an election for recall in which the reason for his recall is to be stated in 200 words, and his defense is to be equally brief.

Senator O'Gorman was entertained at luncheon by Gov. Dix at the Executive Mansion, and to-night was the guest of Lieut. Gov. Conway at a private dinner, to which the Senators and many members of the Assembly and State officials were invited. He will leave for New York to-morrow morning.

HINDU TONIC FOR MRS. BULL.

Administered Against Her Physicians' Orders, Her Brother Testifies.

ALFRED, Me., June 1.—An Indian tonic was administered to Mrs. Ole Bull, widow of the great violinist during her last sickness by a member of her household in contradiction to the orders of the attending physicians, according to testimony given to-day by Joseph G. Thorp, brother of Mrs. Bull, and executor of her will, who was a witness in the proceedings brought by Mrs. Bull's daughter, Mrs. Olea Bull Vaughn, to set aside the will.

Mr. Thorp testified that he had heard complaints about the giving of the tonic and that he had noticed that his sister's condition changed steadily during the time that she was taking it. He startled the audience in the courtroom when he gave his expression of belief as to the effect of the tonic. He said he had noticed for some time, immediately preceding Mrs. Bull's death, what he thought was a quick depression in her spirits, but it was not until after his sister's death that he learned of the administering of the tonic. When he did so, through his receipt of a bottle of the medicine, postmarked in India and addressed to Mrs. Bull, he inquired and found the tonic had been given his sister in her last and preceding illnesses by a member of Mrs. Bull's house and in opposition to the expressed wish of the attending physicians.

The witness also testified regarding the personal feelings of Mrs. Bull toward Mrs. Abbie Shapleigh of West Lebanon, Me., formerly a nurse in the Bull family. It has previously transpired, in an effort to prove that Mrs. Bull was of unsound mind, that she said she was afraid of Mrs. Shapleigh because the latter "could propel killing thoughts over the telephone." To-day Mr. Thorp testified that Mrs. Bull's principal reason for not wishing to see her daughter in the year preceding her death was because Mrs. Vaughn was living with Mrs. Shapleigh.

"I would rather see my daughter with smallpox than have to come to me from West Lebanon, where Mrs. Shapleigh is," was a statement which Mr. Thorp attributed to Mrs. Bull on her deathbed. "I am afraid Oleo will bring germs of harm with her," was another statement Mr. Thorp testified was made to him by his sister.

One letter from Mrs. Vaughn to Mr. Thorp, written from West Lebanon on Dec. 10 last and replying to one from him, said:

> I can only feel anxiety and sorrow at being placed in a position where I cannot help mamma or stand between her and the harmful influences. I am more sorry than I can say that you should shut me out from my rightful place of sharing with you the responsibility for my dear mother's treatment plans.

A letter from Mr. Thorp in answer said in part:

> Your long silence had led me to fear that you had put some wrong construction on what I had written you. Your letter not only confirms this fear but shows a construction so extreme and unwarranted as to be quite amazing. My letters were intended to emphasize the extremely weak condition in which your mother has been, a condition which could not endure any added anxiety or trouble, which from what you said to me, would have followed your coming to see her against her wish.
>
> To say that I am keeping you away is wholly unwarranted. If I were to urge your coming it would make no difference in your mother's feelings or action. Under the circumstances it was my clear duty to write you as I did, urging as your best personal contribution toward her cure a full respect for her wish.
> I know of no hostile influence, to which you refer, from which she needs either your or my protection. All the influences which are about her are quite other than harmful.

Mr. Thorp testified that Mrs. Bull always spoke of her daughter with the utmost affection. Previous to Dec. 12 last, he said, he never knew Mrs. Bull was surrounded by harmful influences.

LEGISLATORS WAIT ON APPORTIONMENT

Democrats Hope to Have the Opportunity to Fix the Lines of Five New Congress Districts.

HIGHWAY BILL GOES OVER

Leader Wagner of the Senate Not Certain of Votes Enough to Pass Dix's Measure.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, June 1.—While Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, has notified his followers in the Legislature that they may now pass some of the bills urged by Gov. Dix in order to keep the pledges of the Rochester platform, it became known to-day that this eleventh-hour change in the legislative programme and the plan to draft a new charter for New York are mere pretexts for keeping the session beyond the time fixed for its adjournment—June 16.

To-day came information to the effect that in reality what is keeping the Legislature here at the present time is the hope that the United States Senate before long will act favorably on the Congressional Reapportionment act which is now pending in its Census Committee. The Democratic leaders are anxious that the five additional districts allotted to this State shall be carved out at the present session of the Legislature, while there are safe Democratic majorities in both houses, instead of next year, when some of the leaders feel a Republican majority may be returned to the Assembly.

Four of the proposed new Congressional districts will be in New York City and one in Erie. It is understood that the districts have already been decided upon by the Democratic leaders and that all plans have been made to put the reapportionment through quickly as soon as word comes from Washington that the Senate has acted.

The Senate held a long session to-day, but Minority Leader Smith in the House found that he was short of the necessary votes to venture consideration of any important measures or bills likely to provoke a contest.

In the Senate it had been planned to put through the Murtaugh Highway bill, comprising the Governor's plan for the abolition of the present State Highway Commission. This plan was quickly abandoned by President pro tem. Wagner of the Senate, though there was only one Democratic absentee, and, despite the fact that Leader Wagner had announced after the Democratic Senate caucus last night that he had a sufficient number of votes to put the bill through. The change caused some surprise until it was learned that it was a case of Boss Murphy's chickens coming home to roost.

Senators Stilwell and Griffin, the Democratic members from the Bronx, over whom the Democratic steam roller passed so recently when they attempted to press to final passage the Bronx County bill, did not attend the caucus last night, and there were some oher absentees, too.

With Senator Grady out in open opposition, Mr. Roosevelt in the same frame of mind, Mr. Stilwell and Mr. Griffin reported ill at home, Leader Wagner had consideration of the Highway bill deferred until next Tuesday.

MAIDS AGAINST MRS. JOHNS.

Two Servants in the Hoe House Give Some Damaging Testimony.

The testimony of a chambermaid and a cook, each of whom holds a "character," signed by Margaret Johnson Brown Johns, was filed against her yesterday by the executors of the Robert Hoe estate. The testimony was filed in support of the executor's contention that Mrs. Johns, who was Mrs. Brown when Hoe met her, obtained a trust deed and the transfer of a mortgage as consideration for her relations with Hoe. The estate is seeking to prevent her from profiting by these documents.

Emma Byfield, a chambermaid at the Hoe house, Brunswick Square, London, said that Hoe and Mrs. Brown appeared to bear close relations to each other. She said they exchanged caresses and endearing remarks when they thought the servants were out of range. Alice Butler, the cook of the Brunswick Square house, gave similar testimony.

The testimony filed yesterday was taken in London before Elkan Nathan Adler, under a commission signed by Supreme Court Justice Newburger.

$1,000,000 ADDITION TO THE RITZ-CARLTON

WORK TO START AT ONCE

Tearing Down Private Houses Now to Make Way for It—Modern Buildings Going Up All Around.

A million dollar addition to the Ritz-Carlton Hotel at Madison Avenue, from Forty-sixth to Forty-seventh Street, is to be built at once. It will increase the present capacity of the hotel about one-third, adding 10,000 square feet to the land area covered by the buildings, and when completed the Ritz-Carlton Hotel will occupy more than half of the entire block bounded by Fifth and Madison Avenues, Forty-sixth and Forty-seventh Streets. It will bring the hotel right up to the rear of the southern half of the Windsor Arcade, 180 feet east of Fifth Avenue.

This large addition to a hotel, which was opened less than six months ago represents a radical change from the proposed plans which were announced when Robert Walton Goelet, who owns the Madison Avenue block front on which the hotel stands, leased from Elbridge T. Gerry the entire Forty-sixth Street frontage to Fifth Avenue, including the lower part of the Windsor Arcade. Mr. Gerry took a long lease of this plot, fronting 280 feet in Forty-sixth Street and 100 feet in Fifth Avenue, at an aggregate rental of $11,000,000. He has decided to retain the southern half of the arcade for three years, and at the time the lease was made it was said that the addition to the hotel would be a low structure, the chief feature of which would be a magnificent ballroom extending through the block from Forty-sixth to Forty-seventh Street, with an eighty-foot frontage, adjoining the rear of the hotel on each of those thoroughfares.

William Harris, Chairman of the Ritz-Carlton Company, which controls the hotel, arrived here a few days ago from London to discuss the building plans, and as a result of several conferences with the Directors it was said yesterday that forty-four feet immediately adjoining the hotel in Forty-sixth Street will be used for an eighteen-story addition to the main hotel, while the 56-foot frontage to the west will be used for the ballroom. The latter will be a two-story building, thus giving ample light and air to the upper floors of the hotel.

The original proposal of using additional land in Forty-seventh Street has been abandoned. The eighty-foot frontage next to the hotel on that street was subleased from W. & J. Sloane over a year ago after that firm had obtained the northern half of the Windsor Arcade for their new quarters. The Sloanes did not require the eighty feet in the middle of the block, and it was leased by the hotel company, ostensibly to prevent the erection of a big loft, which would shut off the light and air on the Forty-seventh Street end of the hotel.

The Ritz-Carlton Hotel at present has a frontage on Madison Avenue of 200.10 feet and 140 feet on both Forty-sixth and Forty-seventh Streets. When the addition is finished the Forty-sixth Street frontage will be 280 feet, while the open alley in Forty-seventh Street will protect the light of the Forty-seventh Street end as well as the rear of the eighteen-story addition. Its total square foot area will be increased from 28,000 square feet to 38,000. The eighteen-story addition will add 100 extra sleeping rooms to the hotel. It now has 250 rooms. The ballroom, with its frontage of 56 feet and 100 feet deep, will be one of the largest in the city. Warren & Wetmore, who designed the hotel, have prepared the plans for the new buildings.

The hotel has been a pronounced success from the start and the increasing demand for rooms led the Directors to make more elaborate plans for enlarging the house than had at first been intended.

Work began this week in tearing down the five old-fashioned private residences on the north side of Forty-sixth Street, and the contract has been let for the excavation, which will commence next week. The building operations will be pushed as rapidly as possible, and within a year or early in the Fall of 1912, the addition with the great ballroom will be ready for use. The ballroom structure will also include a large banquet hall and several private dining rooms.

Robert Walton Goelet owns or controls on long leases the entire block, with the exception of the northern half of the Windsor Arcade, 100 feet in Fifth Avenue and 200 feet in Forty-seventh Street, on which the new building for the Sloane carpet firm is being erected. That portion of the arcade is now nearly demolished and the new business structure, which will be an artistic eight-story building, will be occupied by the Sloane firm next February. Its facade is to be entirely of limestone with Doric columns on both the Fifth Avenue and Forty-seventh Street sides. Mr. Goelet has made no announcement of what he eventually intends to do with the Forty-sixth Street end of the Windsor Arcade. It is now in the hands of his agents, Harris & Vaughn, for business rentals on three-year terms. At the expiration of that time a high-class commercial building in keeping with the Sloane structure will probably be erected there. The Ritz-Carlton Hotel was formally opened on Dec. 15 last. It cost more than $2,000,000, and is the only hotel in the city conducted on the English plan.

TRANSFER TO WALDORF ASTOR.

William Waldorf Astor Gives Part of Waldorf-Astoria Hotel to His Son.

William Waldorf Astor, who is now an English subject, has transferred in trust for his eldest son, Waldorf Astor, the southern half of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, the property conveyed being the northwest corner of Fifth Avenue and Thirty-third Street, 98.9 feet in Fifth Avenue and 500 feet in Thirty-third Street, including the southerly half of the Astor Court business structure. The property has been conveyed under a trust deed to the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company. Under the terms of the deed Waldorf Astor is to have absolute control of the property during his lifetime, with the privilege of transferring it to his issue, but should there be no issue it is to revert to John Jacob Astor, the younger brother of Waldorf Astor.

Waldorf Astor is now 32 years old and has two children, a son born in 1907 and a daughter born in 1909. His wife was Nannie Langhorne Shaw, one of the famous Langhorne sisters of Virginia. She married Robert G. Shaw of Boston, and was divorced from him several years ago.

The property conveyed to Waldorf Astor is valued at more than $10,000,000, being one of the choicest parcels of Astor realty in the city. The Thirty-fourth Street end of the hotel is owned by Col. John Jacob Astor of this city, a first cousin of William Waldorf Astor, and was erected a few years after the Waldorf was built in 1893, the double name, Waldorf-Astoria, then being given to the enlarged hotel. William Waldorf Astor's real estate holdings in New York City are estimated to be worth something like $300,000,000, and it is said that other large parcels are likely to be transferred under somewhat similar conditions to his heirs.

Dowling, M. J. McCloskey, and Walter McEntire.

SCHOOLBOYS PLAY 'CAESAR.'

Shakespearean Tragedy Presented Under Trees by Youngsters at Riverdale.

Shakespeare was again brought forward under the greenwood tree yesterday afternoon at the Riverdale School for Boys, when about five hundred friends, parents, sisters and brothers—some bigger and some smaller—of the boys of the school, came to see a performance of "Julius Caesar" played on the lower lawn. During the four years of the school's existence it has been the custom to give an annual performance of some Shakespeare play. In former seasons "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and "As You Like It" were presented.

These productions by miniature actors have met with such great success that this season it was decided to undertake the performance of a tragedy, and also to arrange a suitable platform where future performances could be given. So, down in the wooded hollow below the main building of the school, overlooked in every direction by hills, waving with forest trees, a stone platform was built and covered with grass.

Directly behind this platform the hill goes up almost sheer. It abounds in rocks and tall trees and the location seems a superb one for the enactment of al fresco drama. The exits and entrances were made from either side of this platform, where screens had been improvised from maple boughs. Of course, they didn't and couldn't entirely hide the multi-colored mob which takes part in "Julius Caesar," and, besides, the boys didn't want to be entirely hid.

Long before 4 o'clock, the hour appointed for the beginning of the play, people began to arrive, and the boys had been waiting behind their screens since 3:30. As they recognized members of their families they raised bare arms, surmounted by jeweled fingers, over the boughs and waved them wildly. Just before the beginning of the first scene some twenty of them scurried up the rocks and over the hill, to get into position on the other side of the stage, from which they must make their entrance.

A large number of camp chairs had been provided for the guests, who came well fortified with Summer parasols. But the day was cool and most of the chairs were in the shadow of the trees, and so the sun offered no uncomfortable opposition to the players.

As the Dean of the school remarked before the figurative curtain rose, these players are amateurs in the best sense of the word. They play for Art only. And he also added that the two masters, Mr. Beach and Mr. Pike, who had prepared the boys to appear in the play, also were working for Art only. It must be understood that speculators cannot obtain seats for these performances, principally because there are no seats on sale. One is admitted by invitation only.

"Julius Caesar" was chosen as the play of the year, for several reasons. In the first place, the women's parts are comparatively unimportant, and in yesterday's version they were ruthlessly sacrificed and did not appear on the programme at all. In the second place, the long cast and the mob scenes made it possible to include all the boys of the school in the production.

In a wooden frame emblazoned with "S. P. Q. R." were placed large posters denoting the place where each act and scene were supposed to take place. These announcements constituted about all the scenery of the piece.

The play opened, of course, with the entrance of the Roman crowd in festive mood, and when four and twenty little boys came on in multi-colored Roman togas, with bare legs, screaming and flinging long-stemmed daisies to the real winds, it could be seen at once that "Julius Caesar" was to be played with spirit. When the soothsayer, in blue wool, with long, white whiskers—a boy of 10, perhaps—appeared to bid Caesar "Beware the Ides of March," somebody in the audience rose and took the small boy's photograph, and this occurred frequently thereafter, when different characters were greeted by the friendly click of a mother's camera.

The principal parts were all well declaimed, and in a few instances acted with not a little skill. The honors of the performance fell to Philip R. Meyer, who appeared as Cassius. He forgot a line in his first long speech in the first act, which so annoyed him that he made a gesture characteristic of young boys in anger, but thereafter he was letter-perfect. Donald MacDougal appeared in three characters, but as Casca he was at his best. Ernest Haines was excellent as Marcus Brutus; Jean Jacques Bertshmann was the Marcus Antonius, and Charles Hoff the Julius Caesar.

Others who took part were: E. Kunhardt Warren, Robert M. Powell, Kelvin Johnston, A. D. Harvey, Cipriano Andrade, 3d, Arthur I. Keller, Jr., Edward Keller, Norman Vanderoef, Howard D. Hackett, Arthur W. Bingham, Wade E. Oldham, John A. Mapes, Herman Rawitser, Jr., Edwin S. Jenney, Fred Bertschmann, Eliot Farrington, Lewis White, Walter Amory, George Andrade, George J. Openhym, J. Alden Baudoine, Hamilton Day, Hudson L. Fisher, John M. High, Jr., Gilbert M. Harris, P. Rockwell Kent, Douglas S. Mapes, Lee M. Rumsey, and H. Bertram Smith, Jr.

After the play was over refreshments were served on the upper lawn.

Children Give "The Tempest."

The pupils of the Larchmont Manor School presented an abbreviated version of Shakespeare's "The Tempest" last night in the Larchmont Manor Parish House. The pupils entered heartily into the spirit of the piece and delighted an audience which filled the parish house. The dancing of several of the child actresses was heartily applauded.

Mortally Stricken in Restaurant.

William Woodman, 55 years old, a builder, living at 1,125 Broadway, was seized with apoplexy last night while dining in Mouquin's Sixth Avenue Restaurant with a young woman. He was taken to the New York Hospital, where he died shortly afterward.

PATTEN IN NEW DEAL TO BUY JULY WHEAT

Plan Is to Discount Bullish Government Report Said to be Due Next Thursday.

ALL BULL HOUSES BUYING

Traders Still Discussing the Possible Gains or Loss by Lichtstern, Who Bought May Wheat.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 1.—Contrary to general expectations, no failures were reported today as a result of the manipulation of May wheat. Notwithstanding the fact that a committee of the Directors of the Board of Trade was conducting an investigation of the methods employed by a powerful syndicate to force the price of May wheat to $1.04 and a fraction, with threats of drastic action, the same interests involved in the May deal started a new movement to-day in July wheat.

July wheat was the popular feature today, while September lagged. It was evidently the intention of the bull leaders to work the price of July up, as all the bull houses were on the buying side. An advance of 2 cents was easily attained and created a more bullish sentiment.

As the cash wheat is held off the market by the bulls, the theory is that with no hedging sales, all the selling of July and September for the next few weeks will be for short interests. That the market had more friends to-day was apparent from the buying by Patten and others. The disposition is to discount the effect of a bullish Government report which is due next Thursday, and at the rate of the advance to-day traders said it will not take long to accomplish it.

A few of the commission houses are favoring September wheat as the active future, arguing that any good bulge in the neighborhood of $1 for July will probably bring out heavy sales by the bull interests, while on any good break the wheat is likely to be absorbed by the same people. It was said that the shorts in wheat were well in to-night, and that a good many of the local longs had taken profits, but the disposition for the time being is to look for higher prices.

Bartlett, Frazier & Co. led in the buying, followed by Finly, Barrelle & Co., Logan & Bryan, Peavey, and a string of professionals. There was considerable realizing, which caused some recessions from the best prices. Cash sales amounted to 15,000 bushels of wheat, 100,000 bushels of corn, and 375,000 bushels of oats.

At the finish net gains were 1 to 1¾ cents, with July leading. June sold up from 90 cents to 92½ cents, with the close at 92 cents. July advanced from 89¼ cents to 91½ cents, and finished at 90⅞ cents bid. September sold up 1½ cents, to 89⅛ cents, and closed with sellers at 88¾ cents. December finished at 90⅜ cents and year at 87⅛ cents.

A. J. Lichtstern, who is now referred to as the "king of the wheat pit," following his exploitation of May wheat, was inclined to be reticent to-day when asked to figure out his gain or loss in the recent deal. Despite optimistic statements that his winnings will amount to well over $1,000,000, a close observer on the Board of Trade stated this morning, with conviction, that whichever way Lichtstern may turn he confronts a loss. It is estimated that Lichtstern has anywhere from 10,000,000 to 15,000,000 bushels of cash wheat. Some of it has been shipped out and held where storage is cheaper—Buffalo, for instance. The open question with the trade to-day is: "Will the bull interests, with this tremendous load of cash wheat on their hands, sell at a loss or hang on?"

Most of this wheat was taken at an average of 96 cents a bushel. The best grades of cash wheat now bring about 96 cents on the open market. The difference between the May price and cash wheat ranged from 10 to 14 cents in the closing days of the month. If forced to sell, Lichtstern would lose about 10 cents a bushel.

It will cost from $150,000 to $175,000 a month for storage, insurance, and freight on that amount of wheat. There is one chance if he holds on. If there should be an accident of some sort to the growing crops there might be a scare which would again run prices up to $1 or so. He could then turn around and sell for July or September at a higher price than he paid.

A new move to prevent corners in grains and provisions and to provide for an equitable settlement was taken by the Board of Trade Directors to-day. They adopted and ordered posted an amendment which provides for a committee of three to fix a settling price where defaults are made at the maturity of a contract, and for a liquidating damage of 5 to 10 per cent., to be paid by the seller to the buyer.

BOY SLAYER ADMITS ALL.

Makes a Clean Breast of the Shooting of One of His Comrades.

Carmine Piambino, the thirteen-year-old boy of 19 Cherry Street, who has admitted killing his playmate, John Miale, early on the morning of Memorial Day, was held without bail yesterday by Coroner Holtzhauser and turned over to the Children's Society. He will be arraigned again to-day and the case will then go to the Grand Jury. The inquest has been set for next Wednesday. Andrew Leone of 24 Cherry Street, Frank Liaco of 1 Batavia Street, and Antonio Liaco of 29 Cherry Street, companions of the dead boy and Piambino, were held as material witnesses.

It developed yesterday, according to the Coroner, that Bartelo Inziemi, a barber of 18 Monroe Street, had sold to the youngster the revolver with which he killed Miale. Inziemi was taken to the Coroner's Court and later was arrested on the charge of selling a weapon to a minor. He was taken to the Tombs Court, where he was arraigned before Magistrate Steiner and held under $3,500 bail for trial.

The Piambino boy made a clean breast of the shooting to the Coroner yesterday morning, clearing Leone, the first to be accused, because later on the day of the shooting he had sold the revolver to Martin Flannigan of 22 Cherry Street. He told of the purchase of the revolver by John Miale, who, he said, had stolen $17 on Saturday from his mother. The boys spent Monday night at his home, he said, as his mother was in Ohio testifying in a damage suit against a railroad for the death of her husband. The shooting had occurred Tuesday morning about 9 o'clock. At first, he said, they thought that Miale was only shamming, but when they were unable to revive him they put the body in a sack and carried it down to the cellar of the house. They had hit upon that scheme from what they remembered of some Wild West sories, one of the boys said. The boys admitted that they took all the money left on the dead boy's person, about $7.50.

LADY DAVIES ARRIVES HERE.

Sails Immediately for the Pacific to See a Sick Son.

Lady Davies arrived from Southampton yesterday on the White Star liner Majestic. A few hours later she sailed on the United Fruit Company's steamship Almirante. She is hastening to the bedside of her son John Cecil Davies, a gunnery Lieutenant on the British gunboat Trent, who is ill with enteric fever in the Ancon Hospital. Lady Davies was in Montenegro when she received a cable dispatch announcing the illness of her son. She started at once for England, and arrived there just in time to catch the Majestic.

This is not her first journey of the kind, she said. Two years ago she was in London when a cable dispatch reached her that her son William, an officer in the British Army, was ill with typhoid fever in Bombay. She went to India and brought him back to England.

Dynamiters Destroy a Bridge.

IRWIN, Penn., June 1.—Dynamiters destroyed the bridge between Herminie and Madison on the Sewickley branch of the Pensylvania Railroad, last night. About six weeks ago the bridge near Claridge, on the Manor Valley branch, was dynamited. Both bridges were in the Westmoreland County miners' strike zone.

To the People of Greater New York:

Rich, Well-to-Do and Wage-Earners: The Plan of the United Stores Association Is for You.

"Secretary of Agriculture Wilson and other students of the high cost of living have urged the formation of co-operative stores or societies as a means of permitting the products of the farms to reach the consumers at moderate cost. They have argued that a large part of the difference between the prices paid to the producer and those paid by the consumer were made up of the charges of middlemen and handlers who add nothing to the value of the product. The transportation is a small factor.

"With co-operative stores it is urged that these profits would be done away with and the producer would get better prices, while the consumer would pay less."

—Editorial Milwaukee News, May 23.

To accomplish this end is the earnest aim of the United Stores Association.

By this plan the granger and the manufacturer will receive an equitable price for his product, the retailer a legitimate increase of profit which he is willing to share with you—the consumer, and you will secure in addition to this the best the land and the manufacturer can produce.

In both cases the prices of the natural and manufactured product will be so much lower that it will solve to a large extent the problem of the high cost of living for the consumer.

The United Stores Association will bring to you the desired result. All that is necessary to make it a success is organization; organization is attained through co-operation.

The grangers are solidly organized, the manufacturers are only too willing to be organized, and the responsible retailers are being called upon by our experienced organizers and the benefits accruing to them by becoming members of our Association and the serious consequences to which they will expose themselves by ignoring the demands of their customers are being explained, and they are joining the Association by hundreds.

The rich, the well-to-do and the wage earner will find throughout the city stores best suited to their needs—the most reliable and the best in every class.

The Directory of Dealers identified with the United Stores Association is, and will continue to be, a roll of honor. The patronage of these stores will be made up of the most desirable trade—thrifty people.

☞ Remember—An average cash dividend of six per cent. on their purchases will be paid to associate purchasers of the United Stores Association. Go to your dealer, if he is reliable and responsible, and urge him to join the U. S. A.—if he has not already done so. Pledge him your support and tell him it is for his benefit and yours. Do it now!

MANGLED BY 70 TRAINS.

Body of City College Boy Found in Subway Hours After He Was Killed.

Thousands of men and women traveling northward in the Subway yesterday passed unknowingly over the mutilated body of a college boy, who early in the day was killed by one of the local trains between the Fifty-ninth and the Sixty-sixth Street stations. Subway employes were ignorant of the fact that the boy had been killed until more than six hours after the accident happened.

He was Abraham Rosh, a student at the City College, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rosh of 412 West Fifty-fourth Street. Abraham, who was 18 years of age, would have graduated next year. He started to go to the college shortly after 8 o'clock yesterday morning, with his class books slung by a strap over his shoulder. His parents and his little sister Rosie, a girl of 15 years, thought him safe in school until late in the afternoon, when a Subway employe called at their apartment with the information that a slight accident had befallen him. This employe seems to have overdone the mission with which he was charged.

"Your son was struck by a train and received a little bruise on the cheek," he said to Mr. Rosh, "but the wound has been stitched up, and he is at the West Sixty-eighth Street Police Station."

Mr. Rosh hastened to the station, believing he would find his son there, only slightly hurt. A fearful shock awaited him. The police would not let him view the body of the boy, so badly was it mangled.

It is estimated that some seventy Subway trains and at least 35,000 passengers passed over the body before it was found.

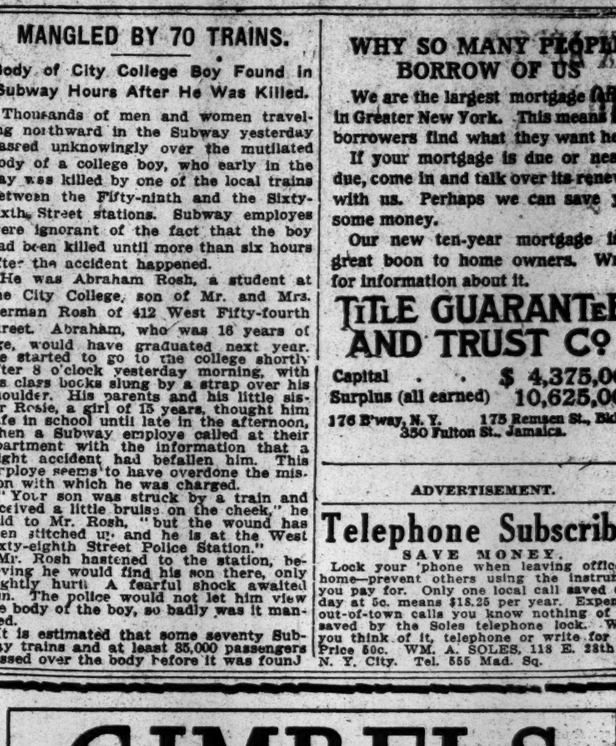
GIMBELS



"I Never Saw Handsomer Clothing—Not Even Custom-made."

"Of course you didn't," was the reply; "for no custom tailor can pay half the salary received by the designers of Gimbel Clothing."

There is not the least ear-mark of "ready-made" about these handsome Summer Suits for Men. Beautiful in style; cut in clean, shapely lines—without a bit of padding—soft in the hands; setting superbly over the shoulders; hanging gracefully, front and back; perfect-fitting collar, soft rolling lapels.

AND LIGHT AS A FEATHER, in weight—because of NO PADDING, and the least possible lining.

We're most enthusiastic about the NEW BROWNS and TANS. They're so different. But, the grays, blues and mixtures are here, aplenty, of course, and quite as elegant.

Men's Mohair Coats and Trousers—a comfort in hot weather—$15 and $17.50. Fourth floor, Front

TWO AVIATORS FALL.

Jerwan and Stevenson Come to Grief at Mineola.

MINEOLA, L. I., June 1.—Two aviators came to grief early this morning while making flights about the aviation field here, but in neither case were they injured, although one of the machines was so badly wrecked that it will take a couple of weeks to repair it.

Miss Harriett Quimby, the young woman aviator, who has been doing some good work recently, was out before 5 o'clock this morning, and made a couple of circles of the course at a very low altitude, and then she had the machine run into the hangar. S. S. Jerwan, who resides in France, was then allowed to take the same machine out for a flight. The machine, a Blériot monoplane, was doing nicely with Jerwan until he tried for a turn at the far end of the field. He warped his wing all right, but forgot to tip his rear rudder, and the machine crashed to the ground a distance of thirty feet, wrecking it, but fortunately Jerwan was not injured, although badly frightened. An examination of the machine showed that the crank shaft was badly damaged, and the motor was also a wreck.

Joseph Stevenson, in a biplane, was in the midst of a short flight when he attempted to make a landing in front of the grand stand, but something went wrong with the machine, and instead of gliding to the ground, it suddenly rose in the air, went over the high fence surrounding the grounds, and landed across the road against a hangar. Stevenson managed to retain his seat, but he had to be helped to the ground by a number of mechanics. Stevenson was uninjured, but it will take a few days to repair his machine so that it can be used again.

GWINN HENRY TO COMPETE.

Greatest Sprinter to Run at New York A. C. Games.

With the running of the eighty-sixth games of the New York Athletic Club at Travers Island Saturday will be seen some of the keenest competition witnessed at the Summer home of America's premier sports organization. This is the summing up of those who are well qualified to view calmly the possible outcome of the series which will attract the cream of the track and field talent of the Eastern States.

Chief among the stars engaged is Gwinn Henry, the Texas youth who recently showed his calibre by beating the 125-yard record, doing 12 1-5 seconds, displacing the previous best mark of 12 2-5 seconds, which has stood for twenty-two years, having been made by Charles H. Sherrill, the former intercollegiate champion, and now Minister to the Argentine Republic.

The various events include handicaps at 100, 220, 440, and 880 yards, one and three miles, one-mile walk, running high jump, running broad jump, sixteen-pound hammer throw, throwing fifty-six-pound weight, javelin throw, sixteen-pound shot-put, pole vault, and 120-yard hurdle race, as well as a one-mile relay race open to clubs, colleges, Y. M. C. A.'s, and all athletic leagues.

NEW ROCHELLE Y. C. RACES.

Season's Events to Start June 17 with Motor Boat Contest.

Open to boats owned by members of the New Rochelle Yacht Club, the annual motor-boat race will be sailed under the rules of the American Power Boat Association Saturday, June 17. Entries will be received by the Regatta Committee at the clubhouse up to noon of June 15. According to the conditions boats will be started on separate signals according to their time allowance.

The course will be from the starting line off Echo Bay, S. E., 4¼ miles to and around the red spar buoy "D2" off Motts Point, thence to and around the stake boat at the starting line, leaving marks to port in turning. Course to be sailed twice over. Distance, 19½ nautical miles.

Cabin cruisers will sail in one class. If three or more entries are received from open boats, a separate class will be provided.

Sixteen Entries for Albany Race.

The New York Motor Boat Club, which held its formal opening of the season last Sunday, begins its Summer's work with a membership of 200 and prospects for the busiest season in its history. Much work has already been done on a most extensive programme for the Summer months. On Sunday, June 11, the sealed orders race will be held, and on the following Sunday, June 18, the club will conduct its annual race to Tarrytown Light and return. The big event of the club's racing season will be the race to Albany and return, a distance of 235 nautical miles, which will start at 6 P. M. on Saturday, July 1. The 1910 race to Albany had twelve contestants, a record figure for a motor boat race over such a long distance, but this year's event promises to be far greater. Sixteen entries have already been received, one entry coming from Salem, Mass. The entries do not close until June 28, and the committee hopes to have about twenty-five boats in line by that time.

Jim Flynn to Box in Paris.

MILWAUKEE, June 1.—Jim Flynn, the Pueblo fireman who jumped into prominence by knocking out Al Kaufman recently at Kansas City, is to be the next American fighter to go abroad for ring honors. His opponent is to be Sam McVey, the colored fighter. Flynn is to box a twenty-round match at Paris on June 24. McVey recently boxed Sam Langford in Paris.

MAX BEHR BEATEN IN NEW JERSEY GOLF

The elimination of Max Behr, the title holder, proved the sensation of the opening match round of the New Jersey State Golf Association championship tournament on the links of the Englewood Country Club yesterday. After qualifying among the leaders with a 79, the Morris County man unexpectedly lost to Charles E. Van Vleck, Sr., one of the Montclair veterans. Behr had been State champion for the last two years.

There were 107 starters, and when the last card had been posted the low score medal went to Oswald Kirkby of the home club with a fine 72, a stroke under par. His closest rival in the testing round was Jerome D. Travers of the Upper Montclair Country Club with 75, while W. E. Shackelford of Atlantic City was close up with 76.

The Country Club of Atlantic City sprang a surprise in the team competition by sending up four men and winning the banner with a total of 318, six strokes better than Englewood, which came next in line. No less than eleven teams were entered. Aside from the defeat of Behr, there was no other upset in the first championship round. Travers disposed of Walter C. Shoup 4 up and 3 to play; Kirkby beat Albert Swords of Morris County by a 3 and 2 margin, and Shackelford had no trouble in downing H. W. Marrin, an Upper Montclair player. The scores:

Pickerel Fishing on Long Island.

Better pickerel fishing has never been known on Long Island than is now to be found in Great Pond, near Riverhead, where big fish are biting with avidity. Joseph Stansbury of Jamaica visited Riverhead with a friend a few days ago and spent parts of two days fishing in Great Pond. They took 245 pickerel, not a few of which weighed five pounds apiece.

They caught the fish while trolling from a rowboat. The bait used was a bit of a small pickerel, including one of the smaller fins. This is secured upon one of the three-feathered hooks, and is considered the best lure for pickerel.

ON THE TENNIS COURTS.

The continuation of the New York Lawn Tennis Club tournament yesterday brought Alexander and Hackett, holders of the National doubles championship, to the net for the first time this season. The event is the Manhattan Bowl, and as the champions have two legs on the trophy it is predicted that they will become the permanent owners. They played two matches which landed them in the semi-final round. In their first match they played the brothers Calhoun and Arthur Cragin, and there was some surprise when the brothers led the champions in the first set at 6—1. When they steadied a little Alexander and Hackett assumed the lead and ran out the set with five straight, and they secured the second set at 6—4. The title holders played Hinck and Torrance in the next round, and they won with a score of 6—2, 6—2. The summary:

Men's Singles.—Fourth Round—W. M. Hall defeated G. C. Shafer, 4—6, 6—4, 6—1; T. R. Pell defeated H. S. Roberts, 6—1, 6—0; S. H. Voshell defeated G. A. L. Dionne, 6—3, 6—2.

Massachusetts Tennis Winners.

BOSTON, June 1.—Two matches were played in the Massachusetts tennis championship tournament in doubles at Brae Burn to-day, bringing the tournament to the finals, which will be played off Saturday with Beals C. Wright and Frank J. Sulloway opposed to R. C. Seaver and G. T. Putnam. Monday the winners will play Nat O. Niles and A. S. Dabney, Jr., the present State champions. The summary:

Massachusetts Championship. Semi-Finals.—Beals C. Wright and Frank J. Sulloway, Boston, defeated C. T. Porter and E. H. Collester, Worcester, 6—4, 6—1; R. C. Seaver and G. T. Putnam, Boston, defeated S. L. Beals and H. R. Scott, Boston, 7—5, 6—2.

English Champion at Madison A. C.

Matt Wells, lightweight champion of England, will have an opportunity to-night to show New York fight followers how much he has improved as a fighter and a boxer in the last four months when he faces Leach Cross, the east side dentist, in the star bout of ten rounds at the Madison Athletic Club. Wells yesterday completed a long course of training which he began in England and continued on shipboard, and his trainers say he is fit to put up his best battle. He finished his work at Crum Lynne, a suburb of Philadelphia. Contrary to general belief, he is a legitimate lightweight, able to make 133 pounds, and he will have no trouble making the 135 pounds for Cross. Cross has been working steadily of late, and has had little training to fit himself for to-night's bout. Leach is confident of defeating the English champion, and he bases his confidence on what Wells did in America a year ago. Both boxers have a strong punch, and the bout may not go the limit. Manager Boag of the Madison Athletic Club has announced a reduction in assessments to $2, $3, and $5.

Britton vs. Tommy Maloney.

Jack Britton, the clever Chicago lightweight, who scared all the boxers of his division into temporary retirement by his work in the recent bout with Johnny Marto, will have another chance to show his speed to New York boxing lovers to-night in a ten-round bout with Tommy Maloney at the Twentieth Century A. C. The west side boy was the only legitimate lightweight who was willing to take a chance against the Chicago boy, and he feels confident that he will outpoint Britton. The latter was willing to give away weight to Jack Goodman, Leach Cross, and others, but there was no strong desire on their part to exchange punches. Maloney has been training hard for the bout at the Xavier Club, and Britton has also been working at one of the local gymnasiums. The management has completed the cooling plant at the Twentieth Century Clubhouse, and it will be in operation to-night if the weather warrants it.

PRINCESS DIRECT'S FAST TIME TRIAL

Thomas B. Leahy's Pacer Covers Half-Mile on Speedway Course in 1:00½.

The fast time of the competing horses in the fourth matinée of the Spring brushing season of the New York Road Drivers' Association yesterday on the Speedway proved a notable feature of the sport.

Thomas B. Leahy's black pacer Princess Direct startled the horsemen last week when she covered the half mile in 1:01½, but in yesterday's brushing completely dazzled the followers of light harness racing when she eclipsed her performance by clipping a second from the mark created last week, covering the distance against time in 1:00½.

As the season progresses the horses appear to better their marks in the various classes, and before the final matinée the fight for the cups which will be awarded to the season's winners promises to be keenly contested.

In Class A A for pacers, Charles Weiland's new bay gelding De Witt proved its worth over its stable mate and former Speedway champion Sid Axworthy by winning both heats in fine style.

Hugh Reilly's bay gelding B Ontime, with Trainer Goldsmith in the wagon, made a creditable performance by taking both heats from E. J. La Place's fast pacing mare in Class A pacing when the Reilly horse covered the course in 1:02. The summary:

LIFE OF AN AUTOMOBILE.

French Experts Trying to Learn Period of Car's Usefulness.

Pfizer's Turf Victory at Longchamps.

PARIS, June 1.—Eugene Pfizer's Padoue II. won the Prix de Montford of $1,200, distance one mile and a quarter, which was run at Longchamps to-day. W. K. Vanderbilt's horses Sam Pietro and Mirambo finished second in the Prix de Courcelles, $800, distance one mile, and the Prix des Acacias of $5,000, distance one mile and a half, respectively. In the Prix du Champ de Mars, of $1,100, distance one mile and a half, Frank J. Gould's Clemtigny secured second place.

NEW YACHT'S TRIAL.

Commodore Plant's Thelma, on Malden Trip, Does 20½ Miles Per Hour.

Commodore Morton F. Plant's new 138-foot steel twin screw motor yacht Thelma, designed by Charles L. Seabury, left Morris Heights at noon yesterday for New London, with Commodore Plant and party on board. The builder's guarantee called for a speed of twenty miles per hour, and this was exceeded by half a mile. The contract also called for delivery on June 1 and the boat was complete in all particulars, ready for commission on that day.

The new sixty-five-foot cruising motor yacht Spray II, built for Henry B. Joy of Detroit, Mich., was launched on Monday last. This is a big, able-looking craft, very roomy, and will be used by Mr. Joy at his Summer place at Watch Hill, R. I. A six-cylinder one hundred horsepower engine is installed. The contract for this boat calls for a speed of twelve miles per hour, and an endurance test of ten hours steady running without any one in the engine room. The boat is controlled entirely at the steering wheel.

A. B. Waring's new twin screw motor yacht Ioneta has made an official trip, and very close to nineteen miles per hour has been obtained. The boat is equipped with two six cylinder 6x6 motors. Mr. Waring is Rear Commodore of the Mooseland Yacht Club, where he will use the boat this Summer.

A new sea-going type of open launch, thirty-seven feet long, built for Arnold Wood, for service at Bar Harbor, Me., was launched yesterday. This boat is fitted with a six-cylinder 4½x5 motor, which is guaranteed to drive the boat at fourteen to fifteen miles per hour.

Dillon Outpoints Cortez in Ring.

Andy Cortez, through his ability to take an unlimited amount of punishment and boring in tactics, managed to last until the end of his ten-round bout with Dave Dillon of Hoboken last night at the Long Acre Athletic Association. Cortez a short time ago waded through the amateur ranks and won a title at 125 pounds, but last night the only thing he was able to show was the staying powers of a rugged boxer. Dillon was fairly clever, possessed more science, and did the best work in the majority of the rounds. Dillon hooked a hard right to the ribs and heart on numerous occasions and then crossed a left to the face that had Andy's right eye in bad shape before the fourth round. The bout was far from interesting, due to the fact that there was too much clinching.

MacKenzie School Champion.

The MacKenzie School baseball team defeated the Holbrook School nine in a ten-inning game yesterday afternoon at Dobbs Ferry by the score of 5 to 4. The game was to decide the baseball championship of the preparatory schools along the Hudson River. The MacKenzie team scored 1 run in the first inning, and the game went along to the eighth inning without another run being tallied on either side. In the eighth session MacKenzie scored, while Holbrook School tallied 2 runs in their turn at bat. In the ninth session, with none out and two men on the bases, Penny of the MacKenzie team drove a three-bagger to the left field fence, sending the two men that were occupying the bags across the plate with the runs that tied, Holbrook having scored 2 runs in the same inning. After Penny's three-bagger to the left field McCrehen, the Holbrook pitcher, tightened up and made the next three men fan the air, while Penny waited at third base for a chance to score. MacKenzie scored another run in the tenth inning, and Spaulding, the MacZenzie pitcher, retired the Holbrook team in the last inning in one, two, three order. The score by innings:

ATTELL BREAKS ARM.

Old Injury Aggravated and Bout with Brown is Called Off.

Abe Attell, featherweight champion of the world, who was scheduled to fight Knockout Brown at the National Sporting Club next Thursday night, was forced yesterday to call off the bout, and it is extremely doubtful if Attell will ever be able to enter the ring again. While boxing with Johnny Daly at Johnson's Roadhouse yesterday afternoon Attell's injured arm again went back on him, and the champion announced that he would make no further effort to fight until next Fall. The injury was first sustained in a bout with Johnny Kilbane at Cleveland last January, and the trouble was aggravated in his bout with Frankie Burns two months later. It was stated last night that Attell suffered a bad fracture of the arm in his bout with Daly yesterday.

The bout between Daly and Frankie Burns of Jersey City, scheduled for next Tuesday night at the Twentieth Century A. C., has ben postponed until Friday, June 9.

Interborough Figures

From the New York World, Thursday, June 1.

A group of prominent merchants of Manhattan have signed a petition in favor of the Interborough's subway proposals in which they say, "The city is safer in advancing $68,000,000 than in advancing $156,000,000"—the former purporting to represent the Interborough, the latter the Brooklyn Rapid Transit demands for public assistance in completing their respective systems.

The conclusion would be irresistible if the figures were right, but they are not. These gentlemen have been deceived.

The Interborough offer of last December called for $53,000,000 of city money. Its amended formal offer asks $68,000,000. No other offer has been made, but the map which the Interborough issued in Brooklyn showing five additional lines of subway which it has never formally offered to build represented, it is now explained, about what the company could do for $110,000,000 of city money upon terms not yet made clear.

The Brooklyn company's first offer contemplated the use of $73,000,000 of city money. The amended offer asks for $103,500,000. The $156,000,000 assumed in the merchants' petition is pure invention. It reads remarkably like the statement issued last week by the Interborough as to the public cost of the rival scheme.

The Interborough always was careless about figures. Its bookkeeping is peculiar. The more reason for hesitating about a partnership with it in a forty-nine-year enterprise.

Mullen and Evans. Time of game—Two hours and twelve minutes.

The Yankees got back to the Hilltop yesterday after a long swing around three-fourths of the American League belt, and observed the homecoming by beating the St. Louis Browns by a score of 11 to 8. Manager Hal Chase was back at first base after a few weeks' illness and cavorted as nicely as of yore. The Yankees got a lot of good batting practice and banged the service of Jack Powell all over the field. Long hits came easy and often for both teams. Ray Caldwell was knocked out of the box in the eighth inning, when the Browns rallied and threatened to dynamite the game.

The longest home-run hit that has been seen on the hill in many a day was turned loose by "Molly" Meloan in the eighth inning, when he whanged the ball almost to the top row of seats in the centre field bleachers. Jack Knight made a homer into the bleachers, too, the ball floating in on the bound.

The game was long and almost uneventful, and there was so much hitting and run-getting that relays of lead pencils were needed to keep track of them. There was a bit of excitement in the third inning, when a red kite dropped from the sky and got into the game. The kite was sent to the clubhouse by Umpire Mullen for refusing to get out when ordered.

Capt. Rhoderick Wallace didn't lead his men in defeat. He let Hallinan play short, and that youth can make errors as neatly as any of them. Not a team in the American League has a chance of ousting the Browns from last place. They have the berth won now, with plenty to spare.

Jimmy Austin and Frank Laporte, last year with the Yankees, were warmly greeted by old friends. Laporte celebrated the occasion with a triple, a double, and a single. The Browns seem to have an odd player from every team on the circuit. Hogan, turned out of doors by the Athletics, is at first base, and Meloan, a stray sheep from the White Sox, decorates right field and fills the job.

The first "chukker" was a toss-up. Both sides got two runs. A walk, a fielder's choice, Laporte's double, and Hogan's single gave the Browns a couple of runs. The Yankees' two came as a result of three hits, two errors, and a sacrifice hit. Two more runs came the Yankees' way in the third inning. Hartzell's triple, a pass, a sacrifice fly, and Chase's single doing the trick. Still they come; two more in the fifth. Knight's home run started it. Hallinan's second error, a walk, and Caldwell's Texas leaguer being responsible.

St. Louis reached Caldwell in the sixth inning and threatened to do some damage. Austin singled and Meloan walked, both going through on Laporte's three-base drive to right. Laporte scored on Clarke's out at first base. Singles by Daniels and Wolter and Cree's double in the same inning sort of dissipated the encircling gloom for a while, but it came back in the eighth inning. Meloan started with a home run. Hogan contributed a three-bagger and Clarke a single. Then Caldwell was pulled out of the game and Quinn walked Hallinan, the first man to face him. The next two batsmen died without a kick.

For good measure the Yankees tagged on two runs in the eighth inning, when Bill Bailey succeeded Powell. Hartzell singled and Cree tripled to the right field barricade and came home on Knight's sacrifice fly.

Boston Pitchers Ineffective.

BOSTON, June 1.—Securing a lead of one run in the first inning, Chicago defeated Boston to-day 10 to 3. The visitors found Collins for nine singles, driving him from the box in the seventh inning. McHale, who replaced Collins, was ineffective. Errors contributed largely to the one-sided score. The score:

UMPIRE DOYLE SUSPENDED.

President Lynch Drops Latest Acquisition for "Not Knowing the Rules."

Umpire Jack Doyle, who used to play with the Giants, and as a player was one of the most capable umpire abolishers in the business, has been suspended by President Lynch for "not knowing the rules." Doyle has been running against trouble everywhere, and met a lot of it in the Cubs-Pirates series. The veteran Bob Emslie, who has been an extra man this season, will go back as a regular in Doyle's place. President Lynch has also fined Manager Bill Dahlen of Brooklyn $25 for kicking so hard in the game between New York and Brooklyn on Memorial Day morning. Dahlen objected to the way "Rube" Marquard planted his feet on the rubber.

McGinnity's Indians Down Providence Grays at Newark.

The Providence Grays opened the season with Joe McGinnity's Indians in Newark yesterday, trimming them by the score of 8 to 7. The game was long drawn out and marked by some very ragged playing.

With the score 8 to 5 against them the Indians made a determined stand in the ninth inning. Johnny Kelly's anxiety to pull the game out, however, led him to try and stretch a single into a double, and he was nailed for the third out at second base after two runs had been scored. The score:

REDUCING THE WOOL DUTIES.

The sturdy and sunburned farmers of the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association, of the American Paper and Pulp Association, of the International Paper Company, of the American Woolen Company, and of the American Protective Tariff League will, we may be sure, stand shoulder to shoulder against the bill revising the wool and woolen duties which Chairman UNDERWOOD of the Ways and Means Committee presented to the Democratic caucus for its consideration yesterday. Senator STONE brought these eminent agriculturists into the bright sunlight of publicity on Wednesday when he forced N. J. BATCHELDER, the President of the National Grange, and his aiders and abettors in the fight against reciprocity to admit that the funds for the Grangers' campaign against the agreement with Canada are supplied from the organizations we have named. There used to be a farmers' organization of some kind in the State of New York with headquarters under the hat of an elderly gentleman up in Lowville, who was accustomed to make arrangements with THOMAS C. PLATT whenever it was necessary or desirable that the voice of the farmer should be heard for influence on legislation at Albany. The National Grange, as it presented itself to the vision of the country after Senator STONE had got through questioning Mr. BATCHELDER, seems to be an organization quite similar in aims and character to that which was so long operated by Mr. JOHN LIVINGSTON of Lowville. These farmers of the protected woolen, paper, and pulp industries, and, in particular, the farmers of the Tariff League, will fight the proposed wool tariff just as they fight reciprocity.

They have an interest, a direct money interest, in defeating any and all attempts to lower the duties on imports. Who has an interest in the reductions proposed by Chairman UNDERWOOD'S bill? We should say that there are several hundred thousand American citizens who will be benefited by these reductions for every one of the immediate beneficiaries of the high tariff who will oppose them. All the men and women in the country are buyers of woolen goods save that, under a régime of protection, multitudes of the poor have had to content themselves with cotton or with shoddy when, for health and comfort, they would have worn woolen garments but for the high cost. The Underwood bill fixes a duty of 20 per cent. ad valorem on raw wool, against the existing duty of 11 cents a pound, which is equal to 44.81 per cent. ad valorem. Blankets and flannels when valued at 50 cents a pound will have a duty of 30 per cent. ad valorem; when valued at more than 50 cents per pound a duty of 45 per cent. ad valorem, against the present duty of 95.57 per cent. Women's and children's dress goods are reduced from 102.85 per cent. to 45 per cent. The duty on ready-made clothing and wearing apparel is reduced from 81.31 per cent. to 45 per cent. On carpets, according to price and cost, the proposed duties range from 25 per cent. to 35 per cent., against the present duties of from 62 to 76 per cent.

This, as any man or any woman can see, is a serious contribution to a reduction of the cost of living. Mr. TAFT has said that the duties imposed in the present woolen schedule are "indefensible." Mr. UNDERWOOD'S bill, while leaving for revenue reasons about half the present duty on raw wool, reduces the imposts on manufactured woolen goods to an estimated average of 42.55 per cent. The average ad valorem rate on manufactures of wool in the Wilson act was 47.84 per cent. The bill substitutes moderate and reasonable rates for the extortionate taxes laid in the Dingley act, which were continued in the Payne-Aldrich act. Nevertheless, according to the estimates of the committee, the revenues will be little affected. The duties collected on manufactured woolens last year amounted to $20,000,000; under the committee's bill the revenue for the first year is estimated at $27,000,000. The revenues from raw wool, it is estimated, will be reduced from $21,000,000 to $13,000,000, the increase of $7,000,000 in duties on wool manufactures nearly making up this loss.

The proposed revision of the wool schedule is unmistakably in the interest of the consumer, that is, of the whole population of the country. The only interest adversely affected is that of the manufacturers, who have so long benefited by the outrageously high duties which date their origin back to 1867. They are few, those who will benefit by the reductions number millions.

THE PARKS.

All citizens who go about with their eyes open will agree with the Commissioner of Accounts that the city parks are in a deplorable condition. The fact that Mr. FOSDICK seems to have felt compelled to have to take charge of them temporarily indicates, perhaps, the reason for their bad state. Mr. STOVER, the President of the Park Board, is an estimable man but a poor executive. He has shown himself incompetent for the practical work of keeping the parks in order, he has, indeed, been largely responsible for their partial destruction. Mr. FOSDICK announces that the park laboring force has no supervision.

The unkept lawns, the accumulation of litter, testify to the truth of his assertion. The other day a man who rides in Central Park Sunday mornings complained to Mr. STOVER that scraps of paper strewn over the bridle paths frightened his horse. The Commissioner replied that the people who visited the Park Saturdays and Sundays scattered the paper about. That, presumably, seems to settle the matter so far as he is concerned. He has lately complained that unruly park visitors destroy plants. Of course they do, unless the destruction is prevented. Money enough is expended by the city to guard the parks and to keep the lawns and paths clean.

But Mr. STOVER'S head is full of plans to alter the design of parks, to lay out straight paths on the gridiron plan. He wants to rebuild graceful iron bridges in concrete, and he wastes time listening to the vapid suggestions of people who cannot comprehend the park idea and are eager to alter the parks. The little parks are neglected altogether, and that Central Park, in spite of the evidences of neglect which the keen eye detects on every hand, still preserves the aspect of beauty is excellent testimony to the merit of its original design, and its conservation in past years by such experts in park management as SAMUEL PARSONS.

CRAM.

Gov. DIX'S appointment of J. SERGEANT CRAM to the Public Service Commission of the First District would be scandalous if it were not so grotesque. All men who have a capacity for indignation for a public wrong will want to say something about the appointment, but what can they say? In the case of CRAM strong language would be inappropriate.

It is probably the most absurd appointment ever made by a Governor of the State of New York. And yet Gov. DIX has the hardihood to say that "Mr. CRAM understands, as few men do, the rapid transit needs of New York City."

THE GOVERNMENT AND THE CLEARING HOUSE.

With the beginning of this month the relations between the Government and the Clearing House altered as much as did the relations of the trust companies. Several trust companies have already qualified for full membership, and the applications of about a score in all are pending. This forecasts, doubtless, the eventual membership of all trust companies which do a commercial or banking business, leaving outside only the few which do a trust business for the most part, and which therefore are only remotely related to the business of the day. If the money situation again should become strained a larger proportion of business than ever before will be settled through the Clearing House by an offsetting of debits and credits, and not by a disturbing run for cash at a time when cash is unusually hard to get.

Since yesterday the same thing is true regarding Government business, as the result of the new law authorizing the acceptance of certified checks on Clearing House institutions for dues to the Government. Each day an enormous sum of actual money is required to pay customs and internal revenue dues. This is a waste of resources even when money is in abundant supply, but it is a needless embarrassment of the situation when money is scarce, and the customary alleviation of the law is abandoned just when it is most needed. The theoretical course of business has been for Internal Revenue Collectors to accept bank checks at their own risk, and there was in use a system of customs transfers which kept the law requiring payment in cash in a manner little different from evading it. During the panic of 1907, when cash payments stopped, the custom of accepting checks for revenue collections necessarily stopped also. The result was that manufacturers who could not get stamps stopped manufacturing and the payment of wages. Hereafter there will be no such needless irritation of whatever monetary stringency we may suffer. The Government will accept whatever will pass the Clearing House, and the Sub-Treasury's clearings will be enlarged about a million dollars daily, or say a third of a billion dollars each year. Incidentally two millions of money will be released for hand-to-hand use. The actual change in the situation is not so large as the figures indicate, since the practice has approximated the new lawful methods in some uncertain degree by general agreement. What is new is the fact that such methods, now being lawful, will not suddenly be discontinued without notice at the time of greatest possible inconvenience.

It is not altogether accidental that these two changes coincide. Evidently the trust companies could not have shared in this business unless they qualified as Clearing House institutions. In other words, as is usual, one good thing has facilitated another, giving hope that still another step may be taken in due time toward the Government keeping its bank account like any other trader. It will be remarked that these new methods relate altogether to receipts. The idea that the Government could by any possibility draw a check on any bank account is as yet altogether beyond the grasp of any official mind. Since 1866 the Government has made bank deposits, but never has checked against them, except in inconsiderable cases, where local payments were to be made at the place of collection. Before any money could be paid out in the regular course it had to be transferred to a Sub-Treasury, and a warrant drawn against it. Money in a Sub-Treasury is as much removed from the currents of trade as unmined gold. Time and again the Treasury has starved the money market by tax collections which would have caused no disturbance at all if they could have been collected and disbursed through the Clearing Houses of the country. Now, having learned how to accept checks in payment, it is to be hoped that the Government will also soon learn how to give them in payment. This is an easy lesson compared with the use of gold and commercial assets as the basis of bank currency. When all that reform shall have been accomplished the Treasury will be out of the money market, instead of dominating it as a central bank in many functions, without the equipment of a bank for performing them with ease to itself and comfort to those who must deal with the Treasury, and have a right to ask that the Treasury itself should not make the dealings unnecessarily difficult.

WHY WASTE TIME?

The heavy showers of Wednesday appreciably increased the water supply in the Croton watershed and in the reservoirs of Central Park, but we cannot with any certainty expect many such heavy rains in the Summer months, and the city authorities should certainly find some better way to insure the people against a water famine than by issuing daily bulletins urging the economical use of water. Presumably, by this time, every intelligent person in the boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx knows that the water supply is low, and is saving or not according to his disposition. In the very best conditions not much relief can be secured by individual savings.

Leaks in the pipes can be mended, but that ought to be done promptly at all times. It is probably true that water meters should be placed in every house, but that improvement cannot be effected offhand. The only way out of the difficulty is to provide for the two boroughs an extra supply of water, temporarily, which will serve to meet all requirements until the supply from the new Catskill works can be used. So far as we know, not a single legal step has thus far been taken toward this end, yet Commissioner THOMPSON and all the engineers of his department are assured that the danger of a water famine in the early Fall is very great.

THE EXIT OF DIAZ.

The Mexican Army, which, represented vicariously by Gen. HUERTA and a small bodyguard, bade farewell to PORFIRIO DIAZ on the Sanitary Pier, at Vera Cruz, Wednesday, has not covered itself with much glory in the revolutionary episode which ends with the departure of the great Dictator from the land he upbuilded and made prosperous. The army, HUERTA declared, had been a white spot in the national blackness, but its whiteness was not conspicuous in the days of turmoil. Even in the City of Mexico, the supposedly strong garrison failed to preserve order in the streets, and the riots in the twenty-four hours preceding the resignation of DIAZ were quelled by soldiers of MADERO, the sight of whose khaki uniforms quieted the malcontents. It is seen now that the fall of DIAZ and his system was due directly to the utter inefficiency and demoralization of his army. When he spoke on the Vera Cruz pier of his gratitude to the army and its loyalty, his mind was clearly in the past. He was thinking of Miahuatlan and Oaxaca, or of the earlier defeat of FOREY on the Cinco de Mayo. When he declared his willingness to return and lead his country's loyal forces under the red, white, and green flag, he spoke as an old man in a dream. When he exclaimed, with tears in his eyes, that he would die in Mexico, he had momentarily forgotten his old age and his bodily ills. It is well that the splendid old man should have had a formal and affectionate farewell and a salute from the harbor fort. But there was no great significance in the manifestation. Mexico must work out its future problems without DIAZ.

It will be no setback to the plans of President DE LA BARRA and his provisional Government that Congress has adjourned without doing anything. Under the Mexican system a permanent legislative committee can sanction any Executive act requiring Congressional approval. The new elections must be held under the old laws, but they are as good as any the legislators would have been likely to pass in their state of emotional excitement. The plan for land distribution is held in abeyance, as it ought to be. It savors of rank Socialism. A better way to force the improvement of the vast desert lands of the north would be to establish an equitable system of land taxation.

THE STATE DAM AT TROY.

We fear that Attorney General THOMAS CARMODY has the better of the argument with Engineer FRY and Chairman BOND of the Advisory Board of Consulting Engineers to the State Canal Commission in the matter of the State dam at Troy. It would be a splendid thing for this State if it could save $800,000 and charges for upkeep of the dam "by letting the Federal Government build it in the interest of navigation." But a chief condition under which Congress bestowed money to build the dam was, that the Secretary of War should be empowered to grant leases "for the use of the surplus water for water power created by the same, at such a rate and on such conditions, and for such periods of time, as may seem to be just, equitable, and expedient." The United States has a right to control navigation. It has a right to construct dams for the control of navigation. But it should not ask that this State yield to it revenue from the sale of water power at Troy.

This condition, nevertheless, is set forth in the report submitted by Col. W. M. BLACK, Corps of Engineers, to Federal Chief of Engineers MARSHALL, and by him transmitted to Secretary of War DICKINSON on Feb. 24, 1910. Attorney General CARMODY quotes the reference to this document from the appropriation act of Congress:

> The expenditure of the amounts, herein and hereinafter appropriated, for such improvement shall be subject to the conditions set forth in said document.

It is too bad. We think Attorney General CARMODY was wrong when he said that this State would have to "destroy" the dam at Troy in order to terminate the 999-year leases with the private interests that, according to his opinion, still control it. These interests pay the State but $600 a year for 1,800 horse power, which is really worth over $14,000 a year. The terms of the leases contain the words "abandon or" destroy. On Nov. 22 last the Canal Board expressly "abandoned" the dam. According to Mr. CARMODY'S own argument—that the leases should not be "terminated in any other way than as regulated by their own terms"—the present Canal Commission had no right to rescind the action of the State by restoring the contracts which it had annulled. But this does not, unfortunately, justify the State in ceding, under the terms of the Federal appropriation, its right to water powers that may be developed at Troy, powers so profitable that, according to conservative estimates, their value would within a few years be sufficient to pay for the new dam. The State had better build its own dam at its own expense, and derive a permanent revenue from the sale of surplus water power.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Cutting Out Mufflers.

One of our correspondents voiced yesterday with indignant emphasis what is undoubtedly a real and general grievance—that created by the many automobilists who, almost never with good reason and usually without even a poor excuse, run their machines with the cylinders discharging the products of their explosions directly into the outside air.

This cutting out of the muffler, as it is called, does, indeed, add a little something to the effective power of an explosive engine, since it somewhat decreases the amount of back pressure on the pistons, but the difference is so slight that only on the rarest occasions, in the ordinary use of motor cars, is the energy thus gained necessary for safety or even a measurable addition to convenience. So well recognized is this fact that the builders of several excellent cars do not provide them with any means for cutting out the muffler that is accessible from the driver's seat, and even when they are provided considerate drivers use them very infrequently.

Unfortunately, a large fraction of the chauffeur class are not considerate of anything except themselves. They love to attract attention by making a noise, especially a noise that will give the impression that they are going fast and are reckless, devil-may-care fellows like the heroes of the big races, whose machines, as is well known, run unmuffled for the sake of saving the few seconds in a short contest and the few minutes in a long one that this device would cost them.

The unmuffled engine also gives a warning of its approach sufficiently alarming to make people step out of the way in undignified haste, and that, too, amuses the unmannerly chauffeur, as well as enables him to drive with less care than he would otherwise be obliged to take. Of course neither of these is a good excuse for cutting out the muffler, and as a matter of fact that device is not needed, and probably should not be allowed, on any except the racing cars that stick to racing tracks.

An even worse nuisance than the unmuffled automobile is the unmuffled motor boat. This is unlawful, but it exists in great numbers, nowadays, wherever there is a piece of water much bigger than a mud puddle, and it is doing not a little to destroy American tempers and wreck American nerves.

Anonymity Has Its Advantages.

Of course, Senator GRADY, being an intelligent as well as an eloquent statesman, has no slightest expectation that the bill he introduced this week, compelling the addition of the writer's name to every editorial article any newspaper prints, will ever pass or even come to a vote. Yet this absurd requirement has occasionally been enforced in several countries, and it has been more than once suggested as desirable here by people who demanded it more seriously than Senator GRADY did and without the excuse of personal irritation which he had to prompt their action. There have even been writers who were so far from being real newspaper men as to chafe under anonymity and to yearn for the privilege of putting their names under their editorial utterances, vanity making them indifferent to, or unable to see, the fact that thus would they lose, not gain, in authority and influence.

Behind most such movements as this, however, lies the illusion that signatures to editorial articles would fix responsibility more definitely than does the present system, and facilitate punishment of one sort or another for statements false or objectionable. In reality, the effect would be the other way, for the responsibility of a newspaper, so far as concerns anything except assault and battery, is already as definite as anybody could reasonably ask, and anybody who must—and can—"lick the editor" need not be restrained by any weak compunctions about hitting the wrong man.

These would-be reformers of journalism, too, should remember, or perhaps it would be more nearly correct to say should learn, that for all editorial expressions, theoretically, and for most of them practically, no one man can truthfully take all the credit or all the glory. They are usually—by no means always—the product of a single hand in the selection and arrangement of words, but as to substance, they are very apt to be in some degree the result of consultation, or if not that, of following a general policy in the formation of which many minds have been engaged.

Signatures, therefore, would be considerably less frank and honest than is assumed by those who would demand them, and they would perhaps oftener misplace responsibility than place it. To editorial anonymity there is no real objection, and it has many real merits and advantages. "The paper says" is one thing; "this or that man says" is another thing, much less important.

Can This Be Even Half True?

It will be noted with keen interest, we think, that a woman on trial here this week on the charge of practicing medicine illegally said while testifying in her own defense that when she delivered a lecture in a church she increased the likelihood of having a numerous audience by paying the priest or minister in charge of it 10 cents for every hearer present.

The lectures in question, while nominally on the general subjects of health and hygiene, were really devoted to the exploitation of medicaments in the manufacture of which the lecturer is interested, and it is hard to believe that many clergymen could be thus moved to countenance and assist an enterprise medically so heterodox.

When the witness was asked to name those whom she had hired in this way to "drum up" listeners to such advice as she had to give, her lawyer promptly intervened to save her from the necessity to reply, and, as the court sustained his objection to the inquiry, the public's eager curiosity will go unsatisfied.

That seems a pity, for the thing charged either is or isn't done, and the matter is one of sufficient importance to make its clearing up desirable.

COST OF GARDEN TRUCK.

It Is Lower on the Farm, but Too High When Distributed.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Notwithstanding there has been a large reduction in prices of many products at the farm, the cost to consumers has not been correspondingly lessened.

Pork has declined 50 per cent. in value, yet bacon and hams cost the consumer practically the same. Milk, butter, and eggs are much lower in price at the farm, but to the consumer the cost is out of proportion to what the producers receive.

The difficulty in the way of the consumer obtaining these products of the farm at less cost is the cumbersome and expensive system of distribution after leaving the farm. Closer co-operation between railroads and farmers could be made to produce great economic results. If storage plants were established at the railway stations close to the farms, where perishable products could be put into them quickly and with no deterioration, they could be distributed as needed and delivered in much better condition than to transport them long distances in hot weather and then store them in cities after deterioration has begun in transit.

Cold storage does not arrest deterioration after it has begun, it merely prolongs it. If railroads could build storehouses at stations, farmers, through co-operative associations, could put up perishable products in small packages carefully graded and packed under supervision and put into a near-by storage quickly and in perfect condition, thereby saving enormous waste that annually occurs at the farm from imperfect and inadequate means of handling and marketing. Co-operation between railroads and producers along this line would be of large advantage to both.

Co-operation between railroads and consumers at the market end would result in immense gain to the city consumer, and also further to the railroads. By establishing great central markets with storage facilities, large numbers of consumers could obtain their supplies quickly in the best condition and at the least cost, while other great numbers could have their supplies delivered expeditiously and direct from the cars in great auto trucks. There is no reason why railroads may not be economic distributers of products as well as public carriers.

This system would call for the organization of consumers' co-operative leagues in cities when orders for daily supplies could be sent in to the railroad markets, and the small packages delivered direct to the consumer instead of being transported through two or three middlemen, with the added cost of each following. This would reduce largely the three to six retail shops on a single block for which the extra costs for rents, labor, and profits are paid by the consumer. The auto trucks carrying tons will deliver far more rapidly and at less cost than the many one-horse market wagons, with their limited loads and more limited horse power, that are seen driving away from boat docks and railroad stations to retail shops in all parts of the city.

While our country has made rapid strides in progress in many things it is far behind our European neighbors in utilizing the advantages of co-operation in obtaining the necessaries of living in food and other supplies at the least cost. Effort and work will be required to develop a practical system of market co-operation, but when such is presented there are many who will readily give it assistance and support. GEORGE T. POWELL, President.

Letter Carriers' Panama Hats.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Last Summer, I believe, importations consisting of great numbers of Panama hats were held up by the United States Treasury Department on allegations of undervaluation, and so those hats "missed their market" for that season. Thus, I suppose, a stock of Panama hats was accumulated that would be rated this season as "hand me downs."

To-day the letter carriers of the United States Postal Department appear in Panama hats.

Query: Does this represent an operation in "futures" by the United States Government, or an act of charity related to a policy of Federal paternalism?

Words of Appreciation.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The appreciation of an obscure young woman may not be much to gratify your "yearning for praise," but that same young woman would like to send a hearty "thank you" for a clear view, gained through your editorial articles, of matters otherwise beyond her grasp, and another "thank you" for your very delightful bits of humor.

TRINITY PARISH YEAR BOOK.

Income of Nearly $900,000 Leaves a Deficit for the Year.

The annual year book and register of Trinity Parish was issued yesterday. The volume, which includes nearly 400 pages, is illustrated with more than 100 half tones, which show the wealth of the parish and its varied enterprises.

The pictures show children at play at the Sea Side Home, Islip, and in St. Luke's Camp, at Bellport, L. I.; boys learning handicrafts at the manual training school of the parish, young athletes wearing the insignia of the eleven schools maintained in connection with the parish, girls making dresses and learning to cook at the various guilds, soldiers marching to services on Governors Island, foreigners learning English, and Armenians gathering to attend services.

In spite of these diversified activities, the Rev. Dr. William T. Manning, rector of the parish, reports that the religious side of its work has not been neglected.

"Church attendance throughout the parish has shown no falling off," he says, "but, on the contrary, in a number of our churches, the records show a marked increase. The number of communicants, 8,595, is also greater than last year."

The vast activities of the parish are supported, the report shows, largely out of rents from real estate. The total receipts of Trinity Corporation last year were $863,718, of which $751,269 came from rents. Pew rents collected in four churches brought in only $16,626.

More than this amount was expended, so that the report shows a deficit for the year. This was due, the report explains, to the large number of improvements made to the tenement house property of the parish.

"The work of improving and developing the property of the parish," says the report, "is being carried forward steadily and with greater rapidity than could have been anticipated. In the past two years more than 225 of the dwelling houses owned by the parish have been removed and many new buildings have been erected, and are in the course of construction."

The property of the parish, characterized by the report as productive, is appraised this year at $13,693,500, which excludes all the churches, chapels, schools, and burial grounds. Dr. Manning discusses the subject of this vast property endowment in his preface to the report.

Nearly $100,000 was contributed by churchgoers in Trinity Parish, Dr. Manning reports. He says:

"The collections and contributions from the several churches of the parish are not included in the financial statement of the corporation. These offerings and contributions are received and disbursed by the clergy under the general direction of the rector, and therefore do not appear on the books of the corporation. The total amount thus received from the churches during the past year is $98,990.02, which shows a considerable increase in the offerings over last year."

During the past year, the report shows that Trinity Parish has canceled many mortgages it held on other churches, several of them for long terms. The amount of mortgages so held has been reduced from nearly $400,000 to $121,910.

SUFFRAGISTS ALARMED

Over Bill That Denies Them Right to Watch at the Polls.

The woman suffragists have a new trouble on their hands in the Wagner-Levy bill, amending the general election laws. The part of the amendment troubling the women reads: "Each watcher must be a qualified elector of the county in which the election district for which he is appointed a watcher is located." As the women are not yet qualified electors, this will prevent them from acting as watchers.

At the Woman Suffrage Party Headquarters in the Metropolitan Tower yesterday afternoon the women were hard at work "molding bullets," they said, but actually with a corps of typewriters getting out petitions which will go to the constituents of the men who will vote on this amendment.

The Post Road "Grab" Bill.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read in THE TIMES this morning the editorial article entitled "The Albany Post Road," and, speaking as one living upon that road, wish to thank you for the stand you have taken.

For a number of years great efforts have been made to repeal the law of 1896, (now part of the general highway law,) which forbids trolley tracks upon the Albany Post Road, and these attempts are pushed with great vigor. Those persons who reside upon the Post Road in the County of Westchester, as well as many others, who, while not living upon the road, live near enough to it to take an interest in it, have opposed these attempts to repeal this law, because they feel that the withdrawal of the restriction would shortly result in a trolley road being built along the highway, to the absolute destruction of the road for any purpose except that of the trolley. The road is a very narrow one, being at its widest part thirty-five feet in width, and, as your article very pertinently states, is virtually a parkway. It is the main artery of travel for vehicles from New York City to points north and west. Many of those who have built residences upon or near the Post Road have done so relying upon the statutory declaration that no trolley shall be built upon it, and the same is true of those who have within recent years purchased property upon or near the road.

The Craze for Political Change.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The craze for constant change—for it is nothing else—hangs like a pall over all Government and business effort in this country. Hardly has the incumbent of any office got fairly acquainted with its duties than we are casting about for his successor, or if he gives evidence of being well fitted for a position he may hold and honestly administering it, to promote him at once to a higher one instead of keeping him where he is doing much good, and this rule applies to all branches of the Government, from the highest to the lowest offices.

The Wicked City.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Pastor Hafer's determination to quit his pulpit because of the "general cussedness" of residents of your city reminds me that some years ago my wife, who was a native of New York, in coming over to visit friends was attracted by the nervousness of a young girl in an adjoining seat, and said to her: "Why so disturbed?" To her surprise, the young lady replied: "The conductor announced Newark, and so New York is close. I am afraid to enter the city, as I have heard they are so wicked there."

THE OLD HOMESTEAD.

Where verdant hills stand friendly guard
O'er pleasant pasture-lands
And fields with golden blossoms starred,
The fine old homestead stands.

Its builders surely builded well
And planned their work to last;
Its sturdy timbers seem to tell
Of giants in the past.

Old-fashioned flowers about it blow
In sheltered garden-space;
And ancient elms in stately row
Their branches interlace.

Here honest toil brings sure reward;
Here vain ambitions cease;
With kindly nature in accord,
Man's life is joy and peace.

Who would not leave the sordid strife
Of forum and of mart,

SAFETY NOT SECURED IN BUILDING CODE

Architect Flagg Denounces as Vicious Its Specific Naming of Permissible Materials.

MEASURE JAMMED THROUGH

Contrasts It with Codes of Big Foreign Cities and Calls It Relic of Village Custom.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Alderman Kenneally has now finished jamming through the hearings on his Building Code, and due credit should be given him for the skill with which he has conducted the operation; by cutting off debate on the general merits of the measure and by continuing the hearings all day Saturday, when many of those who wished to be heard could not be present, he saved time and the trouble of listening to adverse arguments on matters already settled. The whole proceeding might seem farcical to one unacquainted with the peculiar customs of New York, but to those who are it portends mischief. This building code is as bad as it is unscientific, in which quality it closely resembles the present one and its predecessors. It is drawn on an entirely mistaken notion as to what a building code should be.

The New York building law is a relic of the past, a sort of an inheritance from the time when the present city was a small provincial town. By this I do not mean that the law is the same now as it was then; it has been frequently changed, but the method of draughting it and the principles used in making it are the same. Our building regulations began in a small way many years ago. Certain objectionable practices were forbidden and certain others prescribed. There were no broad general principles laid down for securing safety, but each matter which seemed to need attention was dealt with separately, and this same system has been followed ever since. Now, while such a method might be made to apply after a fashion for a small place where building operations were of a simple nature, it cannot secure safety, it cannot be made to work satisfactorily for a great city like this is now and where building operations are of a highly complex nature. Hence the general discontent with the present law and with those revisions of it which have been proposed as a substitute for it.

To one unacquainted with New York customs it would seem as if the draughting of a suitable building code would be a comparatively simple matter, and this notion would be strengthened in one who took the trouble to examine the building regulations of the other great cities of the world. They are brief. They regulate the details of administration, thickness of walls, state the safe bearing capacity of soils, classify buildings, fix the limit of their height and area, and do things of that nature. No attempt is made to specify what materials shall be used for certain kinds of work, what shall not be used, or how they shall be used, as our law attempts to do; but for each kind of building material in common use permissible working stresses are established. Then the builder is free to use any combination of them he chooses within the safe limits thus fixed.

Our law attempts to secure safety by specifying the kind of materials to be used for specific cases and the method of their use. Of course, no such attempt can be successful, for it is impossible to foresee every contingency. The method of overcoming this difficulty, or I should say of attempting to overcome it, is naïve and quaintly illustrative of the provincial origin of the whole procedure. As the law cannot possibly be obeyed, the Superintendent of Buildings is given authority to modify it without check or hindrance. One unacquainted with building affairs in New York can have but a faint conception of the power which this clause confers on the head of the department. He is the law; he is above the law; outside of it, in fact. He can reward friends and he can punish enemies. From the moment he takes office he is beset by applicants who want special favors. In the past this power has been grossly abused. Fortunately, at the present time the Superintendent, Mr. Miller, is a man of high character, who can be trusted, but it has not always been so, it will not always be so.

Thus it will be seen that the framers of the instrument tacitly admit that the method they use is wrong, for if it were right it would apply to all cases and it would not be necessary to deputize some one to change the law when it will not work.

Even if we had a sensible building law it might still be proper to allow a wide latitude of discretion to the Superintendent of Buildings within the law, but neither he nor any other man should be allowed to go outside of it.

Any one who will take the trouble to wade through the labyrinth of special directions which make up the bulk of this document will find innumerable instances which illustrate how unjust, illogical, and mistaken is the method used in its compilation.

Here is just one illustration:

From remote antiquity walls have been made by alternate layers of mortar confined in forms of wood or other material and stones of small size (about as large as two fists) pounded into it until the mortar works up and fills all the interstices. This was the method of the ancient Romans. The remains of such buildings as the Pantheon, the baths of Caracalla, the Basilica of Constantine at Rome, and the stupendous aqueducts which cross the Campagna bear witness to its excellence. Yet when I tried to build a simple area retaining wall by this method, using material found in making the excavation, I was prevented from doing so because the building law makes no mention of that way of building. A law drawn on the principles which I advocate would permit of any kind of construction provided it was within the limits for safety placed on the materials used.

MARY MANNERING IS MRS. WADSWORTH

SECOND MARRIAGE FOR BOTH

Miss Mannering Obtained Divorce from James K. Hackett and Mr. Wadsworth's Wife Divorced Him.

Mary Mannering was married yesterday afternoon to Frederick E. Wadsworth of Detroit, Mich. The ceremony was performed at her home, 50 Central Park West, by the Rev. Dr. Frank O. Hall of the Church of the Divine Paternity in the presence of only the members of the family. Mr. and Mrs. Wadsworth left last night for Detroit, and will spend the first part of their honeymoon at Mr. Wadsworth's home, Grasse Point Farms, Mich.

When Miss Mannering and Mr. Wadsworth appeared at the City Hall yesterday to take out a marriage license they let it be understood that they intended to be married next week, Thursday, in order to avoid any publicity at the time. The fact that the ceremony took place yesterday will come as a surprise to most of their friends, who had not been let into the secret. Last Summer it was reported that they were engaged, but at that time Miss Mannering stated that such a report was premature. Mr. Wadsworth had then just been divorced from his wife, Luella Peck Wadsworth, who had received a decree for extreme cruelty in Kalamazoo on July 11, 1910, and the custody of the children.

Miss Mannering has also been married before to James K. Hackett, the actor, from whom she obtained a divorce on April 19 of the same year. She retained the custody of their only child, Elise Mannering Ketalas Hackett, who is now about 8 years old. Miss Mannering's real name was Florence Freund. She is of English birth, and began her stage career at the age of 15, when Kyrle Bellew engaged her for a part in "Hero and Leander," which he produced with Mrs. James Brown Potter.

She then became a pupil of Herman Vezin, an American actor, and played a number of Shakespearean parts through the English provinces. Daniel Frohman saw her in a comedy called "The Late Mr. Costello," and engaged her to come to America as a member of his Lyceum Theatre Company. She made her début here in 1896 in "The Courtship of Leonie." On May 2 of the following year she married James K. Hackett, then the leading man of the company, but the marriage was kept secret until January, 1898. She made many personal successes with the Lyceum company, notably as Fay Zuliani in "The Princess and the Butterfly," and in the title rôle of "Trelawny of the Wells."

For several seasons she was a joint star with her husband, and then she went out at the head of her own company under his management. Then, when she separated from him, she starred in various plays and recently she has been under the Shubert direction. The seasons of 1906, 1907, and 1908 she starred in Mrs. Rida Johnson Young's "Glorious Betsy," and for the last two years she has been appearing in "A Man's World," a drama by Rachael Crothers.

Mr. Wadsworth is at the head of the Detroit Motor Boat Company, and is said to be very wealthy. He is well known in New York. He was a regular attendant at the motor boat show in Madison Square Garden, and those who knew him there had frequently commented on his attentions to Miss Mannering. Last year his company built a special yacht, which was named for the actress.

In the marriage license Miss Mannering gave her age as 32 years, and Mr. Wadsworth said he was 43, giving his birthplace as Durham, Conn. Miss Mannering's contract to star under the Shubert direction has still one year more to run, but it is said to be her desire and the desire of Mr. Wadsworth that she retire from the stage at once. Unless arrangements can be made with the Shuberts, however, she will continue to play for another season.

Brush-Barrows Wedding To-morrow.

The marriage of Miss Winifred Barrows, daughter of Mrs. Barrows and the late Rev. Miss Barrows will have as her matron of honor Mrs. Rodman Gilder of New York. Her bridesmaids will be her sister, Miss Dorothea Barrows, and Miss Frances Ritch of Greenwich, Miss Hilda Wood of New York, and Miss Gertrude Green of New Milford, Conn.

Miltimore W. Brush, brother of the bridegroom, will be best man, and the ushers, Walter Loring and Paul Mather Barrows of Greenwich, Charles W. Knapp of New Haven, Robert D. Bardwell of Pittsfield, Mass., Geoffrey Kortright, and Karl W. Kirchwey of New York. The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. Joseph H. Selden.

Miss Philena Van Wyck, a cousin of ex-Mayor Van Wyck and former Supreme Court Justice Augustus Van Wyck, was married yesterday to Eliot Gordon at the villa of her aunt, Mrs. George A. Cassidy, a son of John Cassidy of New York, Vice President of the American Rubber Company, were married Wednesday in St. John's Church, Orange, by the rector, the Rev. Matthias J. McDonald.

LOUGHRAN—CAMPBELL.

Miss Frances Campbell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Campbell of Edgemere, L. I., was married to Charlemagne F. Loughran of Brooklyn by the Rev. Thomas Campbell, S. J., uncle of the bride, yesterday at Loyola Chapel in Park Avenue. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Agnes Campbell, and John V. Dunne was best man. Only the immediate family was present. Mr. and Mrs. Loughran will spend their honeymoon in Canada.

Purchase of a Perugino Confirmed.

The Metropolitan Art Museum authorities state that the cablegram from London saying that the Museum has purchased Perugino's "Resurrection," a companion panel to the four others now owned by Martin A. Ryerson of Chicago, is correct. They say, however, that they did not pay $25,000 for the picture. The Italian artist, Pietro Vannucci, called Perugino for Perugia, the city of his adoption, was born in 1445, at a place twenty-five miles distant from Perugia, and died in 1524. He was the master of Raphael.

Maritime Bowling Club Outing.

The Maritime Bowling Club of the Maritime Exchange will hold its eighth annual outing at Keyport, N. J., on June 11. The club will leave Pier 1, North River, on the Merritt-Chapman Company's boat Chancellor. NEW ARMENONVILLE OPENS.

Hotel Knickerbocker's Open-Air Restaurant Visited by Many.

The Hotel Knickerbocker's new Armenonville restaurant was opened to the public last night. For several weeks workmen have been tearing away the old canopy and stone terrace which were ordered down by the city authorities in order to afford a wider street space. To take the place of these the hotel management has had constructed a terrace and glass marquee, suspended on steel arches. This effect is supplemented by flowers and shrubbery, arranged with artistic bronze designs.

The hotel management said last night that the changes have not decreased the seating capacity of the restaurant and that about 600 persons can be accommodated in the open-air eating place.

Among those at the opening last night were J. B. Bradley, Judge Cruse, Andrew Freedman, Judge Gerard, C. G. Gray, J. J. Townsend, Edward Lauterbach, Baron Oppenheim, J. D. Peter, J. I. Potter, J. A. BARS DEITY FROM STAGE.

Bill Forbidding Representation of the Creator Now Goes to Governor.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, June 1.—The Senate to-day passed the Foley bill prohibiting the presentation of any theatrical performance which includes any living character representing the Deity. The measure, which has been passed by the Assembly, now goes to the Governor.

By the provisions of the bill a person or corporation presenting in a theatre or in any public or private place a drama or other performance in which there is a living character "representing the Deity or known by any appellation which, by the recognized standards of any particular form of religious worship or belief, indicates the Deity, or is reasonably referable alone to such Deity," is guilty of a misdemeanor.

The bill provides that the license of a place in which such a performance is given be revoked.

M., in the Church of St. Mary the Virgin, by the Rev. George W. Atkinson, Jr. of Washington, D. C., who was an old schoolmate of Mr. Wheat in West Virginia. Other marriages in "The Hen Pecks" company this Spring have been Ethel Johnson to Ray Goetz, and Vernon Castle to Miss Irene Foote. Last season, when "The Summer Widowers" was playing at the same theatre, there were three marriages in the company at about the same time of the year.

Friars' Frolic Returns to the Globe.

The Friars will play a return date of their frolic at the Globe Theatre on Friday evening, June 9, instead of at the New Amsterdam on the afternoon of the same date, as was announced originally. The change in the plan is due to the desire of George M. Cohan and the Friars to give a performance in Providence. Providence will see the Friars at the Empire Theatre on the evening of June 8. This will lengthen the Friars' tour by one day. For the Globe Theatre performance no change will be made in the programme, except that several more stars will appear with the company.

Daughter in Home of Dr. N. B. Potter.

A daughter was born to Dr. and Mrs. Nathaniel B. Potter of 591 Park Avenue yesterday. Dr. Potter is Assistant Professor of Clinical Medicine at the College of Physicians and Surgeons and a visiting physician at the New York City Hospital, the French Hospital, and the Hospital for Ruptured and Crippled. Hypocrisy, He Says, to Turn One's Back on Them After They Do the Election Work.

QUITE NECESSARY, HE THINKS

Wishes "Long Life" to the New Police Commissioner—Predicts Next Year's Tax Rate Will Be Higher.

Controller William A. Prendergast defended the political machine in a speech last night calling any attempt of an office holder to hide his indebtedness to a machine when he was, in fact, elected by that machine "nothing less than political hypocrisy." He was speaking at the annual dinner of the Alumni of the Homeopathic Medical College and Flower Hospital.

The Controller's first references to the "purity" of political machines were jocular, and so received, but presently he declared that he was never more in earnest when he said that if political work had to be done, political machines must be relied on to do it.

"The men in any election on whom the candidates depend," said he, "are always machine men, and when elected there is no form fo ethics, or anything else, which compels a man to turn his back on the men who compose the machine which brought about success at the polls. Such a course would be nothing less than political hypocrisy."

Many present remembered the controversy between the Mayor and Controller Prendergast over the political appointments which the Controller made, and much applause followed Mr. Prendergast's restatement of his policy.

The Controller made reference also to his course in attempting to scrutinize the charitable institutions which receive support from the city. He and the Catholic authorities not long ago had some correspondence on the subject concerning Catholic orphan asylums. The Controller declared that such institutions and hospitals have hitherto been almost neglected by the city officials, but as for him, he intended to ascertain not only how much city money was going to each of these public relief organizations, but how it was spent. He wanted to do this, he said, that one much of the purpose of ascertaining whether the city was bestowing all it should, as to learn how the $5,000,000 to be given this year would be utilized.

Controller Prendergast declared the city would spend this year the largest sum in its history. Then, leaning far over the table, and shaking his forefinger emphatically, he said:

"And it will spend more than that next year. Look out for a stiff tax rate next year."

There was a dead silence after this assertion.

The Controller rather defended than regretted the expected expenditure, saying there was great work to be done, and the main point was that the money should be wisely expended, with return dollar for dollar to the people.

He mentioned the new subways as one of the avenues through which the city money would flow outward.

"These subway problems will be settled in two weeks," said he, again cutting slices in the air with his forefinger, "and I am so accustomed to disagreeing with high authorities that I won't even now say this question will be settled in one week."

There was hearty laughter over this, for all knew he was referring to Mayor Gaynor who, about four weeks ago, expressed a belief that the question would be disposed of in a week from that time.

Mr. Prendergast likewise had some fun at the rapid changes in the Police Commissionership.

"The new Police Commissioner was down to see me to-day. Long may he live!" When the diners laughed at this the Controller said: "The rapid succession of Police Commissioners is a splendid illustration of the triumph of hope over experience."

The Controller again expressed himself as opposed to the purchase at this time of the Dreamland property for park purposes, as there was too much, he said, which must be done.

Other speakers were Dr. William Latrop Love, toastmaster; Dr. Harvey King, Dr. Royal S. Copeland, ex-Congressman Cornelius Pugsley, the Rev. Dr. J. F. Carson of Brooklyn, and Melbert B. Cary, President of the Flower Hospital Trustees. About 250 alumni and guests were present. Dr. G. Forrest Martin was elected President of the alumni for the coming year.

YACHT HAD HARD VOYAGE.

1,000 Miles Out of Course Since Leaving England 47 Days Ago.

Out of the mist of the early morning the schooner yacht Sunshine, forty-seven days out from Falmouth, England, and long reported overdue, crept past Sandy Hook yesterday, and came to anchor in Quarantine. The Sunshine is owned by H. A. Vernet, and is under charter to Newcomb Carlton, Vice President of the Western Union Telegraph Company.

It was blowing great guns when the little yacht left Falmouth behind, and the bad weather followed her down the English Channel. It was an inferno that she ran into after passing the Lizard. Capt. Pettican had a close call for his life. When the yacht was about ten days out she encountered a spell of bad weather and a confused sea, which broke upon the yacht from every direction and kept her near standing upon ends.

It was necessary for some one to go aloft, and the skipper decided to go himself. He was about thirty feet above the deck, with the mast swaying and jerking, when something snapped and the rope tightened, pinning both his arms to the mast. So tight was the line drawn that he thought his flesh was cut to the bone. Then a sea struck the boat and he lost his foothold, and hung dangling in the air. As the yacht keeled over he went swaying out into the night, first in one direction and then in the other. Finally he got a foothold again, and wiggled one arm free. Holding on to the rope with his free hand, he got his other released. When he reached the deck again he was exhausted.

A Southampton man was shipped as navigator, and according to Mr. Carlton, it was this man who was responsible for the yacht going 1,000 miles out of her course. The Sunshine left Falmouth in heavy weather, and the skipper was instructed to take a southerly course if the weather did not change. She went to the south, but so far to the south that she ran not only away from her course, but out of the path of passing vessels.

Board of Estimate Orders Clearing of Important Thoroughfares.

The Board of Estimate voted yesterday to abolish all encroachments on the sidewalks of Fulton Street, between Broadway and William Street; Park Row, from Ann to Spruce Street, and Ann Street, from Park Row to William Street. This will mean the clearing away of doorways, show windows, and, in fact, everything projecting on the sidewalks. One of the Subway kiosks at Fulton Street and Broadway will be removed, the entrance being probably transferred to the interior of the building at the corner. Property owners along these streets appeared in numbers and vigorously protested against the proposed changes. One complained that they would mean to him a loss of $50,000.

George McAneny, President of Manhattan, replied that the proprietors of hotels along Thirty-fourth Street were losing $100,000 in each case by being obliged to remove obstructions from the sidewalks.

The work of compliance with the order of the Board of Estimate will be begun about July 1.

EDISON PERFECTS STORAGE BATTERY

On a Three-Minute Charge It Runs Sixty Miles, He Tells Electric Light Delegates.

WILL FIT IN A SUITCASE

Inventor Receives an Ovation in the Convention—Believes Companies Are Giving the Public a Square Deal.

Thomas A. Edison, whose name is part of nearly every big electric light plant in the United States, attended yesterday afternoon for the first time in his life a session of the National Electric Light Association. He made his visit memorable by announcing that he had perfected a new storage battery for surface cars and trucks which would revolutionize the street traction business.

Mr. Edison had been only a few minutes in the Engineering Society Building, where the association's thirty-fourth annual convention is being held, when a TIMES reporter found him, with Samuel Insull, President of the Commonwealth Edison Company of Chicago, about to enter the hall.

"And what may be your line of sorrow?" asked the inventor, thinking the reporter was with the electric lighting business.

When told that it was "newspaper sorrow," Mr. Edison laughingly admitted that while there might be differences in the character of the sorrow, there was not in the degree.

Though Mr. Edison's name is the biggest in the electrical world, few of the several thousand delegates, who come from every part of the United States, ever had seen him before, or heard his voice. The reporter had hardly opened the interview before delegates from every direction flocked to where the inventor stood, listening eagerly to his words and frequently prompting the reporter with questions concerning technical matters about which they wanted to hear.

When asked about the success of his storage battery, recently invented, which is now used to run the surface cars on Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth Streets, Manhattan, he said:

"I have done far better than that now, and nothing has come out about it. I have perfected a battery which can be recharged in three or four minutes and which will run fifty or sixty miles without being recharged.

"The trouble with the first battery was that the recharging took a long time. When charged a car would run all day, but then it took the better part of the night to recharge it and get it ready for the next day. But I have done away with all that. I have now a battery which can be put into a suit case, it is so small and light, and it can run a car, truck, automobile, or vehicle of any kind until the power is used up, and then recharged in less than three minutes, ready for service as before."

"I suppose," said one of the electric light men present, "that one of these new batteries could be used to take a street car over the line once or twice, and then run through the recharging station and out again in three minutes."

"That is it exactly," replied Mr. Edison, with enthusiasm, "or there could be small recharging stations along the line, where batteries might be recharged as much as they needed in a minute or less. The beauty of this battery is that the power can be put into it in small quantities or large without waste of time."

Mr. Edison told of a truck to which he had attached the battery, which, he said, would run sixty miles without being recharged, and which can be recharged in five minutes or less. Asked what he thought of the electric light manufacturers, Mr. Edison said:

"I like their looks first rate. But this is the first time I ever saw them, for I never before attended a session of the association."

"What do you think of the pension and profit sharing plans outlined in the report of the Public Policy Committee, which was adopted on Wednesday night?"

"I haven't read the report yet," he replied, "but I am going to. I have a copy in my pocket now. They sent me a package of them out to my home by express."

When Mr. Edison was asked if he thought the electric light companies needed regulating by the Government, or if they were to be regarded in a class with the Standard Oil and American Tobacco Companies as bad trusts, he replied with emphasis that he certainly did not so regard them. He wasn't so sure about the regulation, but he was sure that they gave good service at most reasonable rates, and that their conduct had been square and upright.

"I certainly believe," he declared, "that they are giving the people a square deal—both the electric light and the power companies."

Mr. Edison said in parting that he was enjoying himself greatly at the meeting, and he entered the hall, where a greeting nothing less than an ovation awaited him. As he appeared in the door he was recognized, and the delegates arose and cheered. Throughout the meeting he was the object of much attention and at its close was forced to hold an impromptu reception.

Charles A. Coffin, President of the General Electric Company, was elected an honorary member of the association and made a short address.

W. W. Freeman, President of the association, was in the chair in the afternoon and introduced Mr. Edison. The delegates will attend performances this evening at three theatres.

IGNORE EYESIGHT WARNING.

Few School Principals Ask for New Labels, and Most of Them Are Women.

Public school Principals are not cooperating over enthusiastically with the Board of Education in its new plan for saving the pupils' eyes, for it was learned yesterday that less than 10 per cent. of their number has applied for the precautionary labels for school books, telling pupils how to save their sight.

Not long ago the Board of Education ordered that instructions for the care of the eyes be pasted in each school book, and had printed 5,000,000 labels, but up to the present only 139,000 have been asked for. This is the label:

READ THIS FREQUENTLY.

1. Take care of your sight; upon it depends much of your safety and success in life.
2. Always hold your head up when you read.
3. Hold your book fourteen inches from your face.
4. Be sure that the light is clear and good.
5. Never read in the twilight, in a moving car, or in a reclining position.
6. Never read with the sun shining directly on the book.
7. Never face the light in reading.
8. Let the light come from behind you or over your left shoulder.
9. Avoid books or papers printed indistinctly or in small type.
10. Rest your eyes frequently by looking away from the book.
11. Cleanse your eyes night and morning with pure water.
12. Never rub your eyes with your hands, or an unclean towel, handkerchief, or cloth.

It was due to the Women Principals' Association that the Board of Education adopted the labels, and thirty-four of the fifty-five School Principals which have asked for them are women.

OHIO BRIBERY CHARGE FAILS.

Nye Found Not Guilty of Soliciting $500 from State Printer.

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, June 1.—"Not guilty" was the verdict rendered this evening in the case of Representative George B. Nye, the first of eight indicted members of the Legislature to be tried on charges of bribery. Nye was at once discharged. He still faces trial on three other indictments of bribery.

It was plain after State Printer Crawford had testified in regard to the alleged solicitation of a bribe of $500 from him by Nye that the State had a poor case. Crawford's testimony was directly contradicted by his own chief clerk, and a dozen reputable witnesses from Pike and Adams Counties swore that Crawford's reputation for veracity was bad, and that they would not believe him under oath.

The State chose the first indictment on which to try Nye, being sure of conviction. Prosecuting Attorney Turner says Nye's acquittal will have no effect on the other indictments against him, which will be put to trial as soon as possible.

The trial of Senator Andrews on an indictment charging him with accepting a bribe of $200 from Detective F. S. Harrison to vote for the Whitmore Insurance bill was to-day set for trial on June 8.

The attorneys defending the accused legislators through Detective D. S. Johnson, head of the Johnson Detective Agency of Cincinnati, have fortified themselves with evidence which will be introduced at the forthcoming trial to impeach the testimony of the Burns detectives.

Mr. Johnson has documentary evidence relating to the character of the three detectives—F. S. Harrison, David Berry, and James Bailey—including the transcripts of the famous Defenbach murder case in Chicago in 1900, which are said to show that Detective Harrison is none other than Frank H. Smiley, who was arrested for complicity in the murder of Marie Defenbach. Dr. A. M. Unger betrayed the Defenbach girl, and then conspired with Smiley to become her fiancé. The two had the girl's life insured for $26,000, Smiley becoming her beneficiary, and Unger gave the girl a powder which ended her life. Smiley attended the girl's funeral as a mourner. He and Unger collected $6,000 of the insurance. Then the companies becoming suspicious, refused to pay the rest, and placed the matter in the hands of the authorities. The arrest of Unger and Smiley followed. The latter received a terrible grilling in the trial, but finally escaped by turning State's evidence against Unger, who is now serving a twenty-year term in Joliet Penitentiary.

The alleged record of Detective Berry, according to Detective Johnson, is that until recntly he was a second-class pugilist, and that J. A. Bailey was for years a gambler in Pittsburg. It is claimed that one witness from Pittsburg, whom Bailey is alleged to have fleeced out of $1,000, will be here to testify against him.

In a heated discussion on the floor of the Senate to-day relative to an appropriation of $7,500 to defray the expenses of the Grand Jury investigation of the bribery cases, Senator Edgar Johnson of Cincinnati said: "I am loth to vote for money which might be used to promote the operations of a man who is said to have murdered a girl. I don't like the idea of abetting a set of detectives who were openly engaged in committing a crime in attempting to bribe members of this General Assembly. It is the duty of a detective to detect crime and not to create it. I don't see how I can cast my vote to pay alleged criminals to commit crime whom the Grand Jury should have indicted. Those who would vote that way would be setting their seal of approval on crime."

Senator Todd said that if it can be shown that the money was to be used to carry forward the investigation of graft he would be for the appropriation; but did not propose to have the State pay for a private enterprise.

The House refused to concur in the action of the Senate in striking out the appropriation for further investigating the bribery scandal. After a bitter debate the Senate amended the Sundry Appropriation bill, which was sent back to it by the House upon the Senate's request, striking out the $7,500 item for the purpose. A compromise report, appropriating $5,000 to pay the expenses of the legislative investigation, was finally passed. The Legislature then adjourned after a record session.

The scenes in the House were hilarious. Three members made themselves conspicuous by drinking from a champagne bottle in full view of the House and galleries and singing, "Nobody Knows How Dry I Am."

Gov. Harmon notified the Legislature that he had no further communication to make.

The Assembly has been in session five months. Democratic members claim that all of the platform pledges have been fulfilled.

MUCH ADO IN ZOO AT JUNE'S ENTRY

'Twas a Day of Moving, Accident, and of Many Varieties of Excitement.

17-YEAR LOCUSTS IN FORCE

Five Newly Arrived Sea Lions Die—Mr. Dick, Chimpanzee, Breaks a Leg—Pythons in a Tussle.

It was a busy day at the Bronx Zoo yesterday. June 1 is generally regarded as ushering in the full rush of the season at the Zoo, and from now on the attendants expect the park to be thronged daily.

Events happened thick and fast, and made it the most crowded day the Zoo has seen this year. They began early in the morning, when the seventeen-year locusts descended upon a corner of the park and were honored with an automobile raid by Curator Ditmars and a crew of his men, who had been holding apparatus in readiness for such an occasion for more than a week. Within a couple of hours the Zoo was the richer by a collection of mounted and prepared exhibits showing the history of the insect from the cradle to the grave.

A few hours later "Dick," one of the troupe of educated chimpanzees, and one of the most valuable animals in the collection, was found lying moaning in the bottom of his cage with a broken leg.

Then five sea lions arrived in their crates after a transcontinental trip from Santa Barbara. They were apparently in good health. Twenty minutes after Dr. Hornaday, the Zoo Director, had examined them, he returned for another look and five were lifeless. A postmortem revealed the fact that they had died of pneumonia.

In the meantime guests had begun to arrive at the Administration Building for the annual sportsmen's day. About seventy-five hunters of big game, members of the Campfire Club, the Boone and Crockett Club, and the New York Zoological Society attended. Director Hornaday had to stifle his grief over the death of the sea-lions and assume an air appropriate to receiving and entertaining the guests.

To add to the fervor of the day a report got into circulation that a regal python had eluded five of his keepers, who were transferring him from one cage to another, and had put them in peril of their lives by its efforts to crush the life out of them in its powerful coils. Then did Head Keeper Snyder, ran the report, save them all by casting before the immense constrictor the carcass of a suckling pig, which was lying at hand, as food for the pythons. The snake chose the pig rather than the men, and their lives were saved. All this turned out, however, to be mostly report.

The Zoo was greatly interested in the advent of the seventeen-year locusts, which have been reported in many places, but had not yet been known to have reached the city. John Rose, one of the special game wardens, had been investigating the killing of some songbirds, and was prospecting a district of the city near the northern boundary, near the intersection of East Chester and Boston Roads. He heard a sound that seemed to come from all four quarters of the globe and was like a saw's efforts when it is biting through a tough log. He decided to investigate, never having heard such a sound there before.

Turning into East Chester Road he found the trees, fences, telegraph poles, and bushes covered with millions of insects. One look at the mass of creatures with glistening wings with their reddish "W" backs, told Rose that the famous seventeen-year locusts had at last reached New York City.

"Dick," the educated chimpanzee, began yesterday an eight weeks' session in the hospital. From now on he can never be left alone for one minute. He lay in a bed of straw, following with his eyes everything that went on around him, but never moving the leg that was bound up in a splint. He is only 2 years old, but seems to know what is the matter with him.

DENIAL BY MR. WAKEMAN.

Says League Never Had Dealings with Allen & Graham on Reciprocity.

Wilbur F. Wakeman, Treasurer and General Secretary of the American Protective Tariff League, has sent the following letter to Senator Penrose in explanation of the league's attitude against the Canadian reciprocity agreement.

Hon. Boies Penrose, U. S. S., Chairman Finance Committee, Washington, D. C.

Dear Senator: I read in the Washington correspondence of THE NEW YORK TIMES of June 1 the following:

Mr. Allen finally admitted that although no cash had actually been received from the sources specified, promises to pay had been received from Mr. Wood of the woolen company, Arthur Hastings of the International Paper Company, Leonard Bronson, General Manager of the National Lumber Association, and Wilbur F. Wakeman of the American Protective League.

If it be true that Mr. Allen made such a statement, or said anything of similar purport, in his testimony before your honorable committee, I beg the privilege of placing before your committee the statement that no promise of financial assistance of any kind to Allen & Graham or any one else was ever made by me or by any officer of the American Protective Tariff League. I have never had any dealings or any personal interview or correspondence with Allen & Graham on the subject of "Canadian Reciprocity."

The Tariff League applied to Mr. Bachelder, Grand Master of the National Grange, for a list of names of grange members. Mr. Bachelder declined to furnish such list.

Our purpose in asking for this list was that of reaching the farmers of the United States with literature calculated to arouse them to a sense of the danger to them that is involved in the proposition to inaugurate free trade in agricultural products. The position of the American Protective Tariff League on this question is set forth in the following resolution unanimously adopted March 21, 1911:

CANADIAN "RECIPROCITY."

Whereas, The American Protective Tariff League has always advocated and now advocates a protective tariff which shall adequately secure all American industrial products, whether of factory or farm, against foreign competition, and,

Whereas, The league has an abiding faith in the wisdom of a policy which brings the factory and farm closer together; and,

Whereas, In our judgment the Canadian "Reciprocity Agreement" is a gross violation of the policy of protection in that it unfairly sacrifices the interests of American agriculture; and,

Whereas, The manufacturer cannot hope to retain protection for his industry when protection shall have been denied to the farmer; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the American Protective Tariff League is unalterably opposed to the adoption of the Canadian Tariff Agreement and urges that all friends of protection bring to bear every proper influence upon the Congress of the United States against the adoption of said agreement.

In the interest of fair play and of an intelligent understanding of the attitude of the Tariff League regarding the proposed Canadian agreement I ask that this communication be given a place in the proceedings of your committee.

WILBUR F. WAKEMAN,
Treasurer and General Secretary of the American Protective Tariff League.

STOCKS OUT OF TOWN

Firmer Tone Characterizes Sessions on Stock Exchanges of Other Cities.

SMALL ADVANCES THE RULE

Sears-Roebuck Up 1½ Points in Chicago—Moderate Activity and Substantial Gains in Boston.

Trading in the principal market centres outside of New York yesterday reflected in lesser degree the stronger tone on the Stock Exchange here. In Chicago, although movements in most issues were narrow, Sears-Roebuck made up the decline of the previous day, advancing 1½ points. Diamond Match and Metropolitan preferred made substantial fractional gains. South Side Elevated and Chicago Subway were moderately active, but moved narrowly. In Boston, the whole list advanced from a fraction to over a point, and the close was at the best prices of the day. The advance in the morning began under the leadership of North Lake, which went to 9⅝ on rumors of favorable developments on the property. Among the leaders in the day's trading were Amalgamated, Island Creek Lake, and North Butte. Prices in Philadelphia were generally firm, but the occasional irregularity of Pennsylvania, Reading, and United States Steel in New York was reflected in the smaller local market for these shares. The Pennsylvania's statement of April earnings was favorably interpreted. While the general market at Baltimore was sluggish, there was a fair demand for Seaboard shares which advanced fractionally.

COTTON BROKERS EXPELLED.

Exchange Acts in Case of Moyse & Co. Regarding Pool Operations.

After a sitting covering many days the Board of Managers of the Cotton Exchange expelled yesterday the members of the firm of Moyse & Co. on charges growing out of the operations of the Scales-Hayne-Patten cotton pool of 1910.

The firm had unsuccessfully fought in the courts the right of the Exchange to try the charges, which were brought by a former customer and member of the bull pool, M. H. Rothschild.

In seeking an injunction the brokers charged that the members of the committee which was to hear Rothschild's charges had been in business relations with him, and that their case was prejudged.

Rothschild's charges grew out of the sale of 5,600 bales of cotton which he was carrying as a member of the pool. Rothschild met the accusations of his associates in the pool with the explanation that the cotton had been sold without his orders. The firm members contended that it had been sold by one of their clerks without their knowledge, but at the orders of Rothschild.

In the long hearing on which the action of the board was based some 1,400 pages of testimony were taken. President Marsh of the Exchange refused last night to give out the details of the charges, saying that a statement of the action would be made on the Exchange this morning.

The members of the old firm of Edward Moyse & Co. who have been expelled are Edward Moyse and Felix H. Moyse. Hugh F. McElroy, who retired from the firm shortly after the dispute with Rothschild, was suspended for one year. It had been generally expected that no action would be taken against the former partner, who was regarded as having had no part in the actions under review.

The action of the Cotton Exchange authorities may not be the end of the fight between Rothschild and his brokers.

A member of the firm said last night an attempt would be made to get indictments for perjury against two men and for extortion against one.

CONFERENCE ON THE ERIE CUT

Railroad Presidents Try to Agree Before Hearings Begin.

In an effort to reach an agreement before the opening session of a hearing before Special Examiner Brown of the Inter-State Commerce Commission, to be held in the Waldorf to-day to hear complaints from other roads and several commercial organizations against the Delaware & Hudson-Erie joint rate to Chicago via Albany and Binghampton, a well-attended meeting of railroad executives was held in the rooms of the Trunk Line Association yesterday. At its conclusion some of the executives said that a satisfactory understanding had been reached, but inquirers were referred to Chairman C. C. McCain for details. Mr. McCain said that no agreement had been reached, and that the matter would have to be thrashed out before the commission.

Presidents W. C. Brown of the New York Central, W. H. Truesdale of the Lackawanna, George F. Baer of the Jersey Central, F. D. Underwood of the Erie, James McCrea of the Pennsylvania, E. B. Thomas of the Lehigh Valley, C. S. Mellen of the New Haven, L. F. Loree of the Delaware & Hudson, and R. L. Walker of the Old Dominion Lines, with J. E. Childs, Vice President of the Ontario & Western, C. F. Daly of the New York Central, J. B. Thayer of the Pennsylvania, C. L. Gray of the Erie, and W. G. Besler of the Jersey Central were present at yesterday's meeting, which lasted all day.

Mr. McCain said that to-day's session before the commission's examiner would go on just the same, and that most of the members of the association who have attended the meetings will appear in response to requests, which they regard as subpoenas. It is understood that the railroads are so near an understanding that it will not be necessary for the commission to act on the complaints.

ADVANCE REPORTS ON COTTON

One day in advance of the Government report on cotton crop conditions a number of trade authorities made public their private views of conditions yesterday, and the aggregate of opinions was for a large increase in acreage as well as exceptionally high percentages of condition.

The Financial Chronicle put the acreage at 37,582,022 acres, as against 35,379,358 acres last year, an increase of 6.22 per cent. The Journal of Commerce, from the reports of 1,800 special correspondents, estimates the area at 35,208,679 acres, basing its figures on the last Government report of acreage, increased by the percentage of gain this season reported by its informants. This gain in acreage is put at 5.5 per cent.

While not expressing crop conditions in percentage, The Financial Chronicle says of the growing plants that while in maturity a little more advanced than in 1910 the crop is probably a little behind an average year. Fields are said to be in a better condition than usual at this season and fertilizers have been much more extensively employed. The condition is reported as better than last year, and fully up to or better than the average of recent years.

The Journal of Commerce gives the condition a percentage of 83.8 compared with 80.2 last year, 82.1 in 1909, 79 in 1908, and the ten-year average of 80.

On the Cotton Exchange a canvass of sixty-four members was made whose combined opinions of the condition of the crop made the average percentage of 85.4.

RAILROAD IS EARNING LESS.

Massachusetts Railroad Commission Reports on Boston & Maine.

BOSTON, June 1.—"Under the best and most favorable anticipated conditions the earnings of the Boston & Maine Railroad for the year ending June 30, 1911, will be considerably less than the earnings for the year ending June 30, 1910. This result, which speaks for itself, is probably sufficient reason why the dividend has been lowered."

This finding of the Board of Railroad Commissioners is contained in a report sent to the Legislature to-day concerning their investigations into the lowering of the rate of dividend declared recently by the Boston & Maine system. The House of Representatives had requested the investigation.

Pacific Bank Branching Out.

Orion H. Cheney, the retiring State Superintendent of Banking, has been elected a Director and Vice President of the Pacific Bank. At the same time Lewis K. Clarke, President of the American National Bank, was elected to the board. Interests identified with the American Exchange National recently purchased a substantial block of Pacific Bank stock, and it has just received authority from Supt. Van Tuyl of the State Banking Department to open a branch at Fourth Avenue and Twenty-eighth Street.

Saving and Investing

The habit of saving is the first step towards investment. After a savings fund has been accumulated, however, it should not be invested until knowledge has been gained of the principles underlying conservative investment.

It is our function as investment bankers to aid investors in selecting investments that would seem to be best adapted to their requirements, and we are always ready to extend the facilities of our organization to any one seriously interested in this subject.

In these days, it is not a difficult matter to obtain investment bonds yielding approximately 5 per cent., and which, in our judgment, combine:

1. Safety as to principal.
2. Convertibility into cash.
3. Opportunity for profit.

Example No. 40

In 1895 we sold Union Pacific 6% gold notes at 85, yielding 10%. They were largely secured by non-dividend paying stocks representing control of important lines. Later the notes were paid at par.

Recurring Opportunities

We now offer, at a price to yield 8%, bonds issued by a dividend-paying railroad, secured by control of the stock of one of the most important railroads in the Middle West. The dividends on the deposited stock offset interest on the bonds.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

GREAT NORTHERN FINANCING

Bond Issue Represents Abandonment of Long-Standing Policy—Effects of the Change.

Continuing the sharp recovery which set in Wednesday afternoon the stock market yesterday rose with very little interruption up to the close of the session and showed gains which in a majority of cases exceeded a point. The Hill stocks, Great Northern and Northern Pacific, took the lead so far as the extent of their advances was concerned, and the day's interest in financial affairs centred largely around the comprehensive financial plan which the Great Northern has put under way—not that the day's forward movement, though undoubtedly stimulated by the strength in the Hill stocks, was attributable to this financing, but because it was the most striking feature of the information presented at the moment for the consideration of the market. The forward movement as a whole was perhaps the natural sequence to the sharp decline of the previous day, which neither the American Tobacco decision nor the situation in the steel trade, though these were pointed to as the reasons for the decline, would appear to have justified.

The news of the Great Northern's financing and the suggestion that this would in time lead to a readjustment of the present scheme of ownership of the Burlington was greeted by Great Northern and Northern Pacific very much as though this financing carried with it unexpected "rights" to the shareholders in those roads. As a matter of fact one of the interesting features of the financing which has been decided upon by the Great Northern is that for the first time in many years the raising of new capital by this road is not accompanied by subscription "rights" offered to the shareholders. Year after year as the needs of the Great Northern grew the policy of its management was to obtain money by fresh issues of stock rather than by mortgaging its property. Thus it was that at the present juncture the Great Northern had free of debt the main line of an important transcontinental railway and was in the practically unique position of being able to offer to investors a first mortgage on a large part of its mileage. There are certain elements in the position of the railroads of this country which add much to the interest attaching to the Great Northern's abandonment of its long-standing policy of issuing nothing but stock and keeping its road free from mortgage debt. Steadily the tendency has grown in the course of the supervision which the Nation has extended over the railways to fix the rate of profit beyond which earnings cannot be reduced without infringing upon the established right of the railways to a reasonable return upon the capital invested in them. Six per cent. and in some cases 7 per cent. have been advanced in court decisions as such reasonable return and more and more the thoughts of railroad managements have been turning to the possibility of a practical limitation being put upon the profits which the railways will in practice be permitted to earn. Whatever may have been the moving cause in the decision reached by the Great Northern to abandon a long established policy special interest attaches to this change in the light of the movement above referred to. If a reasonable return is to be figured on the entire investment in railroad property the capital borrowed at 4 per cent. or a fraction over that rate equally with that represented by stock will be entitled to that fair return. The difference between that return and the interest paid on borrowed money would represent just so much addition to the sum available for division among the shareholders.

Apart from this consideration, however, and without looking beyond the immediate effects of this financing it remains true that if the Great Northern can make the capital which it raises through these 4 per cent. bonds yield as large a return as that which it has raised in the past by issue of 7 per cent. stock the earnings available for the outstanding shares of the road will thereby be increased. This, in the Great Northern's case, would seem to offer an advantage greatly outweighing the mere fact that its property, like practically all other railroad property in the United States, is now pledged under a mortgage. While developing his system, Mr. Hill kept its credit absolutely secure by keeping it free from debt and by this process placed the Great Northern in a position to carry with great ease the bonds which are at last being put upon it.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Spring Wheat Progress.

Current reports from the Spring wheat States of the Northwest lay emphasis on the fact that this year the ground was better prepared for seeding than in any previous year. This and the fact that the acreage was materially enlarged for this season's planting are pointed to as holding the promise of an exceptional yield in those States. Moreover, officials of the Northwestern railroads, which carefully gather reports of the progress of the farms in their respective territories, say that never in recent years have their weekly reports been so uniformly favorable. In giving greater attention to the preparation of the ground the farmers of the Northwest are heeding admonitions which have been repeatedly given them by those who have interested themselves in improving the yield of the farms. James J. Hill has been preaching this lesson for a long time, and it is interesting to find in the current reports of the Northwest an indication that the farmers there are paying greater heed to the advice to leave no more than they have to to the weather, and to supplement nature by a little extra work.

Central West Needs Rain.

In the Central and Western territory, where Winter wheat, corn, and oats are the staples, there is not the same optimism which prevails in the Spring wheat belt further north. The Price Current's summary of conditions says that the hot and dry weather has modified the "previous highly pleasing situation," but goes on to say that how much damage has been done that can't be remedied by prompt relief cannot be definitely stated. Oats have probably suffered most, this authority believes, but maturing wheat may be kept from filling out properly for lack of moisture. Corn, too, needs rain, but this crop has time ahead in which this lack may be remedied. Showers at the close of the week have given partial relief, it is said, "and with this tendency in meteorological conditions it may be that an early general condition of relief will develop.

Central Lines' Showing.

Operating revenues of the New York Central Lines increased by $831,822 in April, to $20,291,723, and a smaller increase in expenses, the amount of increase being $602,130, which put expenses for the month at $15,751,917, and made possible an increase of $229,692 in the net income, which was $4,539,806. For the ten months of the fiscal year to the end of April, however, the figures still show a decrease. For the period operating revenues totaled $78,854,503, a decrease of $348,294, and operating expenses increased by $3,707,190, to $63,646,057, leaving the operating income for the ten months $15,-208,246, a decrease of $3,955,484. In the Pennsylvania's figures made public the previous day, the small gains in net earnings for April, $505,128, are less than the declines in charges for maintenance. Maintenance of way and structures in April was charged with $1,627,970, a decline of $38,247, and maintenance of equipment totaling $2,002,503, showed a decline of $705,484.

American Tobacco Hit Again.

After dropping in Wednesday's market 102 points from its recent high record, American Tobacco added another 13 points to the extreme decline yesterday and touched 405, which is 115 points below the top reached after the Standard Oil decision. The shares had opened at 430 and were strongly bid for at rising prices. Shortly after the opening the price went to 439. The stock moved quietly without the wide differences between sales, and for the first fifteen minutes or so of trading brokers felt that the excitement had died out. When the price softened, however, the downward movement was persistent, and the activity, though less spasmodic, exceeded that of the previous day. The total transactions reported of 1,354 shares is 4 shares greater than the high record of activity established on Wednesday. The close at 412 was 18 points below the last price of the previous day. Standard Oil, in contrast to the other "trust" stock, has been indifferent to the second "anti-trust" decision. Yesterday, though transactions of more than 100 shares were reported, the extreme range was only 1½ points.

Chicago's Growing Virtue.

News of the doings of the Chicago market officials tells from time to time of reform measures which have in them a flavor of apprehension. When the May wheat corner was first getting publicity a few weeks ago, dispatches told of an investigation started by the Board of Trade which, it was reported, would result in the disciplining of several members. Yesterday news came of the establishment of new rules designed to prevent the manipulation of Breadstuffs. The Cotton Exchange, which is the important speculative commodity market here, has made a number of reforms in trading methods in the past few years, but they are regarded by the insurgent members as far short of the necessities. Meanwhile Senator Scott's bill for abolishing short selling has been succeeded by the Burleson measure which is on the calendar, though not likely to come up for action at this session.

GREAT NORTHERN BONDS OUT

First National Takes $20,000,000 of the New $600,000,000 Issue.

With the announcement of the $600,000,000 mortgage placed on the Great Northern Railway, it was learned yesterday that J. J. Hill had sold $20,000,000 of the new bonds to be issued under the mortgage to the First National Bank. They are to run for fifty years and bear interest at 4¼ per cent. Proceeds of the sale will be used to repay the company's Treasury for expenditures made and to provide for other improvements and extensions.

The Bankers' Trust Company has been named as Trustee under the new first and refunding mortgage, and the new bonds will be secured by a first lien on 2,637 miles of road and a general lien on 4,791 miles more. The bonds were dealt in on the Curb yesterday and found a ready market at 102.

It is understood in banking circles that the Great Northern will take over the Northern Pacific's half interest in the Burlington system as soon as an agreement can be reached with interests holding a large amount of Northern Pacific stock. It is said that there is a difference of opinion between James J. Hill and other holders as to the value of the Northern Pacific's equity over the $107,-000,000 which it invested in the Burlington. Mr. Hill regards this equity as worth in the neighborhood of $30,000,000, while others say that settlement should be made at nearer $50,000,000. If a separation occurs, the Northern Pacific will probably retain trackage rights into Chicago over the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy. The bonds are offered by the First National Bank and J. P. Morgan & Co. at 102, to yield 4.15 per cent.

TREASURY HAS A SURPLUS.

Government's Receipts for May $10,-000,000 Larger Than in April.

WASHINGTON, June 1.—The Treasury made a much better showing for May than it did for April, and its condition as compared with a month ago is materially strengthened. The piling up of gold coin and bullion in the vaults continues steadily. A little more than $1,815,000,000 was there to-day—the high-water mark for the Treasury's gold holdings.

The Government's finances begin a new month's business on the basis of a surplus. It is small—less than $1,000,000—but a surplus is shown in spite of nearly $3,000,000 spent from the cash drawer for the Panama Canal. Under ordinary circumstances a surplus of nearly $5,000,-000 would be shown.

May's receipts from all sources exceeded $61,000,000, and beat April by a round $10,000,000. Expenditures, however, were held down to about $56,000,000, some $3,000,000 greater than last month.

The variance in those two items, however, had little effect on the general fund. It stood to-day at $86,400,000, about $1,000,000 better than a month ago, but the working balance shows a loss of approximately $3,000,000 by dropping off to $25,000,000. This one item wavered early in the month and threatened to give some concern to Treasury officials who were anxious that it should not get below $15,000,000, which is considered the minimum consistent with the Government's daily transactions.

FEWER FAILURES IN MAY.

Commercial Agency Figures Show Improvement Over Recent Months.

Failures in May totaling 1,006 with liabilities of $13,460,789, according to the statistics compiled by R. G. Dun & Co., were an improvement over the figures of recent months. Dun's says:

The number of failures was the smallest in five months, comparing with 1,206 in April, 1,124 in March, 1,198 in February, 1,663 in January, and 1,028 in December. The total liabilities of the month were also less than in the preceding five months, comparing with $16,924,776 in April, $18,474,641 in March, $17,-086,471 in February, $24,090,649 in January, and $17,039,081 in December. As compared with preceding years the May record of liabilities contrasts with $9,590,186 in May, 1910; $14,383,760 in 1909, $13,648,381 in 1908, $9,965,-410 in 1907, and $12,992,809 in 1906.

Bradstreet's says:

Telegraphed reports to Bradstreet's for the calendar month of May show a total of 1,080 suspensions with aggregate liabilities of $14,-367,263. There is here indicated an increase of 4.6 per cent. over the total for April, of 16.3 per cent. as compared with May, 1910, and of 14 per cent. as compared with May, 1909, but a decrease of 6.6 per cent. from May, 1908. Compared with the same month of 1907 failures are 36 per cent. more numerous. Only three times in the past eighteen years were failures more numerous in May than in the month just closed.

BUSINESS ALONG ATCHISON

Dull, Says President Ripley, but Crops and Prospects Good.

President E. P. Ripley of the Atchison, in New York to attend a Directors' meeting, reports business in his territory dull, but he looks for better conditions this Fall and Winter than were experienced a year ago.

Mr. Ripley says that crops look well, and indications are for a yield fully as large as in 1910. Heavy rains in the past few days have helped the farmers in Western Kansas and Oklahoma.

The Atchison does not need to buy any considerable quantity of rails this year, Mr. Ripley says, but may be in the market for small amounts to take care of maintenance needs. Some locomotives will be purchased, but the road is otherwise well supplied with equipment. Little new construction work is being done, and with the uncertainties of tariff revision and other matters still to be settled, Mr. Ripley thought that the time was not propitious for new ventures.

The Atchison's board will meet Monday to declare the regular semi-annual dividend on the preferred stock, and action may be taken at the same meeting on the common dividend, although that is not due until the meeting scheduled for the following month. Mr. Ripley will return to Chicago Monday night.

TERMS OF CHICAGO MERGER.

Metropolitan Elevated Accepts Offer Made by New York Syndicate.

CHICAGO, June 1.—Official announcement was made here to-day by Henry Blair that the traction merger syndicate represented by him has filed with the National City Bank of New York and the Illinois Trust and Savings Bank here, as depositaries, an offer to purchase under an agreement South Side Railway shares at $75, Metropolitan West Side Elevated preferred at $75 and the common at $27.50, Northwestern Elevated preferred at $70, and the common at $30.

In addition to this offer the Blair interests give the depositor the right to apply 30 per cent. of the cash payment to the purchase of preferred and common participation shares in the holding company at the rate of one preferred share and four-fifths of a common share for $100.

According to the announcement, the deposits of stock must be made prior to July 1, the committee being F. A. Vanderlip, Henry A. Blair, and Samuel McRoberts. The Directors of the Metropolitan Elevated formally agreed to the terms offered by the Blair syndicate, which now apparently makes it clear sailing for the merger plans.

GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY

St. Paul, Minn., May 31, 1911.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK, New York.

Dear Sirs:

Referring to your purchase of $20,000,000 of this company's First and Refunding Mortgage 4¼% gold bonds, due July 1st, 1961, redeemable at 105 after July 1st, 1941, I beg to inform you they are part of an authorized issue of $600,000,000, secured by deed of trust to Bankers Trust Company, New York, Trustee, under the terms of which they are a lien on all the lines of railway owned by this Company in fee.

The bonds are a first mortgage on 2,070.46 miles and a first lien directly or through deposit of stock on 566.77 miles, and upon all the company's extensive terminals on the Pacific Coast which cannot be encumbered under the provisions of the mortgage except by way of further security.

The issue is further secured through pledge of standard equipment costing $59,073,180, upon $46,200,068 of which it is a first lien. The Company has set aside and is carrying as a sinking fund on its books $19,-090,418 to cover depreciation on and replacement of this equipment. The Railway Company has covenanted to mark distinctively that portion covered by first lien so that it may be readily distinguished from that upon which it is a general lien; to keep in repair and renew the same from time to time, so that the equity now conveyed shall not be impaired.

The Railway Company will not issue any additional bonds (not provided for in the mortgage) nor extend any of the underlying bonds, which are now a lien upon the mortgaged premises and for the refunding of which provision is made in the reservation of $332,162,000 First and Refunding Bonds. The Company reserves the right to issue $7,173,000 Northern Pacific-Great Northern joint 4's due 1921, the balance of the authorized issue of $222,400,000. It will be noted provision is made for refunding this entire issue, which is proper, in view of the obligation being joint and several. Furthermore, bonds and shares of stock, securing in whole or in part obligations refunded become subject to the lien of this mortgage when such obligations are cancelled as provided in the mortgage.

The other general provisions of the mortgage restricting the future issuance of bonds have been so drafted as to adequately provide for the Company's requirements for years to come. In this connection I beg to state no more bonds will be offered for sale to the public during the current year.

As advised by counsel the mortgage as drafted complies with the laws of the State of New York governing the investments of Savings banks and Trustees, and the bonds are therefore legal investments in these particulars.

The net earnings last year were four and one-half times the amount necessary to pay fixed charges and for the last five years have averaged more than four and one-half times the amount necessary to pay such charges. This, without including the Northern Pacific-Great Northern joint 4's, the interest charges on which are taken care of by the dividend from the Burlington stock.

Steps will be taken to list these bonds on the New York and London Stock Exchanges.

Very truly yours,

JAMES J. HILL,

Chairman.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Flower Residence on Fifth Avenue to Make Way for Business Building—Real Estate Securities Sold in Vesey Street Auction Room—Apartment Property in Good Demand.

A number of good deals furnished a fairly active realty market yesterday, the feature of chief importance being the report that the old Anson R. Flower residence at 601 Fifth Avenue, between Forty-eighth and Forty-ninth Streets, had been leased on a long term for business. In the Vesey Street auction salesrooms a new departure was initiated in the formal opening of the Real Estate Auctioneers' Association, formed for the purpose of trading in real estate securities. The rooms of the new organization will be opened from 10 to 11:30 o'clock hereafter on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Thus far the securities listed include the 5 per cent. first mortgage bonds of the Broadway Realty Company, controlling the Bowling Green Building, and the New York City 4½ per cent. bonds of 1960.

The passing of the old Flower house, a five-story structure, for business simply accentuates the ever increasing demand for business on upper Fifth Avenue. It has been leased to Clark & Weinberg, furriers, of 137 Fifth Avenue on a twenty-one-year ground rental at about $20,000 a year net. The Flower estate, it is said, will erect for the new tenants a high-class six-story loft.

The Flower estate owns the two adjoining houses to the south, 597 and 599, which are available for business, and the Forty-eighth Street corner has lately been improved with a new building by the Goelet estate for Davis, Collamore & Co. Just above the Flower house, at 605, is the residence formerly owned by the Pinkney estate and which was purchased at the recent auction of the estate holdings by Hellner & Wolf for $325,000.

Buys in Midtown Loft Zone.

An important sale in the most active part of the midtown loft zone was announced yesterday by A. Coleman Smith, who sold to William J. Fitzgerald 9 East Thirtieth Street.

The property consists of a four-story altered building on a lot 21.5 by 85. It is separated by only the small lot from the big Fifth Avenue plot running from Thirtieth to Thirty-first Street, recently purchased by Benjamin Altman from the Marshall Field estate.

Just what disposition the buyer will make of the property could not be learned yesterday.

Gould Property Sold at Auction.

Among the offerings in the Vesey Street salesrooms was the property at 106 Broad Street offered in partition for the Gould estate. It consists of a five-story building on lot 24.1 by 74.4 and irregular. It was sold by Samuel Marx and was purchased for $49,600 by the Leon Realty Company, Leon Wilner, President, owners of the adjoining property at 108 Broad Street, on the northwest corner of Water Street. Bryan L. Kennelly sold at foreclosure the property at 985 Broadway, near Eighteenth Street, a five-story loft, on plot 25 by 110.10 and irregular. It was bought in by the plaintiff, the Beers Realty Company, for $145,103, about $40,000 less than the indebtedness on the property. Joseph P. TEACHERS NOT TO CRITICISE.

Chicago Board So Rules, but Won't Dismiss Miss Reed for Her Remarks.

CHICAGO, June 1.—Miss Grace Reed, Principal of the Frances Willard Public School, who incurred the displeasure of temperance organizations by her public utterance some months ago that "a respectable saloon keeper is just as respectable as a respectable banker," will not lose her place, for the Board of Education yesterday denied the petition of the Hyde Park Woman's Christian Temperance Union to have her dismissed from the service.

The Hyde Park branch of the woman's organization argued that as Miss Frances Willard was the founder and organizer of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and had been honored by the City of Chicago in naming the school for her, "the placing of Miss Reed in charge of that particular school was an insult directed at the organization and at womanhood in general."

The committee of the Board of Education reported that there was nothing upon which the petition of the temperance union could be granted, but it reported a rule to guide teachers in the future, namely:

"The Principals and teachers in the public schools of Chicago should always refrain from making public any comparison likely to incur ill-will or hatred between classes of citizens as regards religion, race, nationality, or occupation."

AFTER BUTTER AND EGG TRUST

Judge Appoints Referee to Take Evidence as to Control of Prices.

CHICAGO, June 1.—Vigorous prosecution of the Government's suit to enjoin the Chicago butter and egg board from controlling prices of butter and eggs is expected to follow the recent decisions of the United States Supreme Court in the Oil and Tobacco Trust cases. The first step in this direction was taken today when Judge Kohlsaat, in the United States Circuit Court, on motion of Federal District Attorney Sims, referred the case to Charles B. Morrison, who will take evidence.

It is charged that the Quotations Committee of the board hold daily sessions, approximate the quantity of eggs and butter on hand, and arrange the market price accordingly, to the material benefit of themselves.

HARRIET TUBMAN PENNILESS.

Aged Colored Woman Goes to Negro Home She Gave Her Savings to Found.

AUBURN, N. Y., June 1.—Harriet Tubman, the aged negro woman, who piloted more than 400 slaves to freedom prior to the civil war and who was befriended by Lincoln, Seward, Garrison, Wendell Phillips, and John Brown was to-day taken to the Harriet Tubman home penniless.

She devoted all her savings to the work of establishing this institution for aged colored men and women and now at an age which she declares is "between 95 and 100 years" is dependent upon the charity of the home she founded.

The trustees have asked for funds to pay for a nurse to care for her in her declining days.

Effective Advertisements

¶ Many of these advertisements offered good positions at good salaries to those competent to do the work.

¶ The incompetent employe may be carried on the wave of prosperity, but cannot survive the scrutiny of the retrenching period when expenses are cut and efficiency becomes essential.

¶ This is the time to dismiss the useless employe who has no real place in business, and to bring in the competent employe who is worth the salary under any conditions.

¶ This is the page that brings the best and therefore the most economical employe right to the work. An Effective Help Wanted advertisement of fifty words will meet the requirement.

¶ Any advertising agency or telephone 1000 Bryant, The New York Times.

HELD FOR MURDER IN BATHTUB CASE

Scheib, Husband of Woman Found Dead, Was Liberated Five Times and Then Sent to Jail.

FREED ON VARIOUS CHARGES

Detective Seizes Him at Last and District Attorney Has Magistrate Corrigan Convene a Special Court.

After he had been zig-zagged back and forth in six different court proceedings before three separate Justices, and had been five times freed, Henry A. Scheib, husband of the woman found dead on Monday in the bathtub of a three-room apartment at 511 East Seventy-eighth Street, was held last night at a special court proceedings on a charge of murder in the first degree.

For three hours in the afternoon Scheib walked into court to face charges and walked out again free, only to be taken by detectives and hustled back. That he was finally committed to the Tombs on a charge that the committing Magistrate believes is habeas corpus-proof was due to the sudden resolution of a single police official. When for the third time in the West Side Court Scheib had slipped through the meshes of the law, Detective Lieut. Arthur Gloster grabbed him as the door of the West Side Prison opened for him to come out.

"What are you seizing that man for?" shouted Lawyer Alexander Karlin, who had extricated his client from the commitment of Coroner Winterbottom on a homicide charge, and from two grand larceny charges and a misdemeanor charge.

"For nothing at all," said the detective.

"Then I warn you I shall hold you personally responsible for your act. You're violating the law, and you'll get yourself in bad, and I'll see that you do." Then, turning to his client, the lawyer shouted: "Keep up your nerve, we have them beaten four kinds of ways. I'll have you free again by midnight." But the lawyer was not able to make good his word.

Detective Lieutenant Gloster held to his prisoner and informed the lawyer that, while he had nothing in his possession to hold him on, he was sure some papers would be forthcoming, and that if the lawyer had any writs of habeas corpus to serve he might carry them to the office of the District Attorney.

"I could advise my client to smash you in the face and run," suggested the lawyer when the party and groups of interested followers were seated in an elevated train.

"But your client is not likely to take the advice," put in Scheib, contributing the first word which any one, except police inquisitors, had heard him speak since his arrest early on Tuesday morning. Scheib is a mild-appearing young man of slender build and dreamy blue eyes. The detective who was holding him was some half-dozen sizes larger all around.

Scheib's lawyer invited reporters to question his client.

Here is Scheib's answer to the question of why he was married under the name of Hugh Allerton Sherman and allowed his wife's people to understand that this was his real name:

"I can't tell you about that now, because I am compelled to use all my strength for the concentration and conservation of mind, energy, and thought."

This made even the stalwart detective holding Scheib wince, and Scheib followed up his staggering reply by asking the detective this:

"Are you a positive or a negative force? I mean a constructive or a destructive force?"

Gloster admitted that he was sometimes a bit destructive when occasion demanded.

"It is not so with me," said the prisoner. "I am an embodiment of a constructive force. God will not let a constructive force and a destructive force dwell in the same body. I could not, being what I am, do a destructive act."

Scheib's lawyer supplied the key to the conversation. "My client," said he, "tells me that both he and his wife were intense students of psychology and the New Thought, and worked along its lines a great deal."

When the party arrived at the District Attorney's office Mr. Whitman himself was waiting in the outer hallway to receive the prisoner, and with him were the active heads of the detective department, Second Deputy Commissioner Dougherty and Inspector John H. Russell.

The Coroners' offices were found locked, and the Coroners were not about the neighborhood. Urgent telephone calls to Coroners' Physician Lehane and Magistrate Corrigan brought these two officials in automobiles.

There was a feverish haste, as Lawyer Karlan was constantly threatening to seek new writs of habeas corpus which would remove his client from the District Attorney's jurisdiction.

Magistrate Corrigan, District Attorney Whitman, Deputy Commissioner Dougherty, Inspector Russell, Dr. Lehane, and Connor O'Grady, the father of Elizabeth C. O'Grady, who later became Mrs. Scheib, retired into District Attorney Whitman's office for a consultation. Mr. O'Grady had just arrived from Springfield, Mass., and had been taken directly from the station to the District Attorney's office. He confronted Scheib, and identified him as the Hugh Allerton Sherman of Chicago, to whom he had given his daughter in marriage at St. Francis Xavier's Church on July 8, 1907.

Coroners' Physician Lehane added information to the effect that he had just learned that Scheib was in the habit of going to within one block of the East Sixty-eighth Street tenement, and there hiring small boys to go the rest of the distance with the rent money during the months Mrs. Scheib's body was lying in the bathtub. He also said that Scheib had gone to a hardware store a block away from the tenement house about the time of his wife's disappearance and had purchased the largest copper boiler the store carried. Two weeks later, he said, Scheib had returned this boiler, stating that it was not large enough for his purpose and that he wanted his money back. He received part of it.

This data was enough for Magistrate Corrigan. Leading the way out into darkening hallways he went down stairs two flights to a room known as the "Police Court" of the Criminal Court Building.

There he proceeded to hold court, in the absence of the regular court attendants and stenographer.

To Scheib he read the charge of first degree murder, prepared by Inspector Russell, and corroborated by Coroners Physician Lehane. With it he read an affidavit prepared by Inspector Russell, in which he recited the facts of the finding of the body under conditions indicating that it had been dead for four months, and added that he believed that Mrs. Scheib came to her death through the felonious act of the defendant.

In this he described Scheibs's conduct after his wife's disappearance and quoted comments he made to account for her absence from home.

When this affidavit was read to Scheib his lawyer objected that it was not materially different from the affidavit from which Justice Bischoff had released his client in the morning upon a writ of habeas corpus; that there was no proof that a homicide had been committed. He said the police had been desperately at work all day trying to hold his client on spurious charges.

"But this is not spurious—it is a charge of first degree murder," interposed District Attorney Whitman. The District Attorney demanded that the hearing proceed at once. Inspector Russell was sworn as the first witness, and he gave the details of the arrest of Scheib. After he had concluded Mr. Whitman said he had other witnesses he could not produce at once, but would be able to have them in court on Saturday, to which date he asked for an adjournment.

Magistrate Corrigan adjourned the case and held Scheib without bail, his attorney protesting and declaring that he would have him before Justice Bischoff again on another writ of habeas corpus this morning.

Mr. Whitman stated that it was to prepare for such a proceeding that he had insisted that the case be opened and the taking of testimony commenced. He said that no writ of habeas corpus would affect a proceeding already under way, in which the defendant had had "his day in court" and had been regularly held, pending the development of further evidence.

All the turmoil of the day began early in the morning, when Justice Bischoff, in the Supreme Court, found defects in the commitment papers of Coroner Winterbottom. As Scheib attempted to leave the courtroom Detective McMahon made him his prisoner on a charge of grand larceny, preferred by George Wyeth of 2,881 Broadway, for whom Scheib drove an automobile. The charge was that he had stolen a fur overcoat belonging to Wyeth.

The detective hustled his prisoner to the West Fifty-fourth Street Court, where Magistrate O'Connor was sitting. For an hour they waited for Wyeth. Something had gone wrong and Wyeth had decided not to appear. A telephone message to him brought a response that the old coat could go—well, he was not going to mix in the affair.

Facing the alternative of turning Scheib free, Detective McMahon came forward with a charge that he had caught Scheib on May 29 driving without a license.

"Guilty," pleaded Scheib's lawyer, as soon as Magistrate O'Connor had heard the charge.

"Ten dollars or ten days," said the Magistrate.

"I'll pay the fine at once," shouted the lawyer. "Have you got a few dollars you can loan me, Judge? Has anybody here got a few dollars? I have $6, who has $4?" Some one produced the money to cash a check for the lawyer, and his client was free.

At that instant Detective Lieut. Gloster stepped forward with new complaint papers. It was the old charge, which had previously lapsed for lack of a complainant—that Scheib had stolen a fur overcoat from his employer.

"I found the overcoat in the possession of a man named Allen," said the detective.

"But you recite here that you found it in the possession of the defendant," snapped Magistrate O'Connor.

"It was taken from the locker kept by Wyeth in the garage," said Gloster.

"But that doesn't prove he stole it," added the Magistrate. "The prisoner is discharged."

There was a scurrying of detectives to "cover" all the means of egress from the Court House. Scheib was led back to the Fifty-third Street entrance to the West Side Prison, but the iron door had barely swung shut behind him before Gloster had him in his arms and was defying his lawyer to bring upon him all the consequences of the law for illegal arrests.

SCHEIB'S MOTHER TO AID HIM.

Though She Calls Him a Black Sheep, She Comes to His Defense.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 1.—Mrs. Fred Carstern of 173 Western Avenue, Blue Island, the aged mother of Henry A. Scheibe, who is being held by the New York police on a charge of having murdered his wife, will go to New York with ample funds for her son's defense, supplied by her wealthy husband, an 80-year-old real estate operator whom she married three months ago.

"The thought of my son and his great trouble are giving me strength," she said to-night. "Henry was what everybody called a 'black sheep.' He left our home in Chicago ten years ago, and I don't suppose I have heard from him more than three or four times in all those years. Then he usually wanted money.

"Three years ago I heard indirectly that he had married and had settled in New York. I was sure then that everything would be well with him. And now he is charged with this horrible crime.

"No mother could sit by idly and see her son tried for his life without offering all the help in her power. So my husband and I have decided that I should go to New York and help him all I possibly can. I am sixty years old and troubles do not weigh lightly on me. I know the Lord will help me bear this burden and help me to prove my son innocent."

SAYS SCHEIB TURNED CATHOLIC.

Dead Woman's Aunt Declares This Was a Condition Set Before Marriage.

Special to The New York Times.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., June 1.—The marriage of Miss Lillian, or Elizabeth, O'Grady, daughter of Connor C. O'Grady of this city, and Hugh Allerton Sherman, or Henry A. Scheib, was opposed by the young woman's family on religious grounds, according to the dead woman's aunt, Miss Marietta B. O'Grady, a teacher in the public school at Chicopee. Miss O'Grady, who is a sister of Connor O'Grady, says that the girl's father consented to the wedding only after Sherman agreed to become a Roman Catholic.

"The story that the marriage of my niece was a sudden one is not true," said Miss O'Grady. "We all knew of the wedding several weeks in advance and helped her prepare for it. Her father was present at the ceremony and my sister was bridesmaid. We did object to her marriage on the ground that she was too young—she was 17 years old—and also because he was of a different religious faith."

DISTRUSTS RUSSIA'S NEW JEWISH POLICY

WANTS TO SAVE THE TREATY

Protests at Her Discrimination in Favor of Prominent Jews, Saying Our Passports Should Be Respected.

Following the recent announcement in Washington that the State Department had been informed that Russia thereafter would admit American Jews, Louis Marshall of Guggenheimer, Untermyer & Marshall has written a letter to Congressman Francis Burton Harrison expressing distrust of the reported change in Russia's attitude, which he believed was an inspired utterance in line with what he called the "duplicity and lying diplomacy" on her part in the past. He declares that Russia, realizing that America is considering seriously the abrogation of the treaty of 1832, by which American citizens, irrespective of race or creed, were permitted to travel in Russia and Russians to travel here, is trying "to fool the American people" into withholding action until public sentiment dies out.

Even if Russia's promise is sincere, he adds, it would permit free admission solely to Jews prominent in the business world, discriminating against the poor who might wish to visit their old homes. Mr. Marshall declares this Government should insist on unqualified recognition of American passports. This is Mr. Marshall's letter:

Dear Mr. Harrison: I am in receipt of yours of the 29th inst. with regard to the publication in Saturday's newspapers, in which it is stated that Russia has determined to admit American Jews, traveling abroad on business. You ask my opinion with regard to this announcement and to indicate whether I think that any substantial advance toward the desired end has been made. I thank you for this opportunity of expressing my views on the subject.

For many years we have heard of a plan of abolishing passports, of extending privileges to American Jews, of abolishing the Pale of Settlement, but all of these statements were mere emanations of Russia's duplicity and of her lying diplomacy. Unquestionably Russia thoroughly appreciates that the present movement for an abrogation of the treaty of 1832 is the most serious that has thus far been undertaken. She is undoubtedly aware of the feeling that has been aroused throughout the country against the outrage which has been inflicted on American citizenship. It is, therefore, in accordance with Russia's cunning to give out these inspired utterances indicating her desire to "please the American people and to give to those Jews who are prominent in the business world the right to enter Russia.

This is coupled with the sardonic suggestion that the great difficulty which stands in the way of the Russian Government is the possibly hostile attitude of the Duma, which, it is feared, may not approve of the proposed measure. The very suggestion that the Duma, which has been coerced into a state of abject humility, which does not possess even the shadow of power or authority, which is but a subservient tool of the Government, would be permitted to oppose any governmental policy, is a gross insult to the intelligence of the American people. The Duma is as powerless as a babe in arms. It is a mere puppet. All life, all initiative, has been squeezed out of it by Russian bureaucracy, which is as powerful to-day as it was before the Russian revolution.

I have no hesitation, therefore, in saying that if this article emanates from the Russian representatives at Washington, it is but another effort to fool the American people and to bring about a suspension of action by Congress looking to the abrogation of the treaty, in the hope that the present public interest may die out, that the important issue presented be forgotten and that another decade may come and go before Congress will again open its eyes to the colossal insult which has been inflicted upon our country.

But even were Russia sincere in her alleged expression of purpose, even were she to admit American Jews traveling abroad on business, into the pale of settlement, that would not meet the proposition which now confronts Congress. The question involved in the present agitation is not whether the rich Jews or those who have acquired business standing shall be admitted into Russia, but whether any American citizen, whoever he may be, whether rich or poor, merchant or otherwise, shall be discriminated against by Russia in the very teeth of the Treaty of 1832 and notwithstanding its provisions which are applicable to all American citizens.

I am not a merchant, neither is my wife, nor are my children merchants. Why should we, if we desire to visit Russia as American citizens, be excluded because we are Jews and because we are not merchants? Why, even as to merchants should there be a discrimination which would restrict their right to sojourn and travel within the pale of settlement, which would exclude them from St. Petersburg, Moscow, and other great commercial centres? No; this is not a case for a mere palliative nor for the granting of a special favor or the bestowing of grace upon a certain part of the Jews of America.

We are asking for no favors and for no special privileges. We are merely asking that the right of every American citizen, Jew or non-Jew, irrespective of race or creed, shall be respected by Russia in accordance with the terms of her treaty with the United States. We are opposed to the creation of any privileged class of American citizens or of any class of American citizens who are to be subjected to adverse discrimination.

We are equally opposed to the creation of a privileged class of American Jews, either by Russia or by our own country. Absolute equality must be insisted upon. This proposed measure of the Russian Government not only continues the present discrimination against American citizens, but it seeks, with the sanction of our Government, to create an additional form of discrimination which is most offensive and insulting.

I hope, therefore, that nothing short of the absolute recognition by Russia of the American position shall be tolerated; that the resolutions which are now before the House Committee on Foreign Affairs be pressed to passage, and that there be no further trifling with this great question of citizenship which transcends in importance all questions of property and privilege.

Very truly yours,

LOUIS MARSHALL.

The day Congressman Harrison received this letter he introduced a resolution directing the Secretary of State to inform the House of Representatives whether any communications have been received by our Government in regard to Russian discrimination against the American passport in the hands of American Jews. The resolution was referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and will, it is expected, be favorably reported next week.

The Associated Press correspondent in St. Petersburg has reported he can find no confirmation of the reported change by the Russian Government in its regulations concerning the admission of Jews to Russia.

117 KILLED AT MANAGUA.

Government Declares Explosion Was Due to a Plot—Many Arrests.

MANAGUA, June 1.—The explosion which occurred in Fort La Loma on Tiscapa Hill, overlooking Managua, yesterday afternoon resulted in the killing of at least 117 persons. That number of bodies has been taken from the ruins.

It was officially stated to-day that the blowing up of the fortress was due to a political plot. Many Liberals, supporters of ex-President Estrada, have been placed under arrest.

President Adolfo Diaz, against whom the plot is said to have been directed; his Ministers, and others identified with the Government escaped unhurt.

So far as a widespread revolutionary movement is concerned, the Government has issued an emphatic denial, but the situation in Managua is quite as serious as that which arose when the attempts were made against President Estrada last February.

Troops are guarding the palace and public buildings, and detachments of cavalry are patrolling the streets. The capital is practically in a state of siege.

Not a Sale—but a Sale Value

PASSING on good things to my patrons is my policy. Here's good proof of this fact. Just ran into a lot of fine wool fabrics. These fabrics are the kind you will find in the usual $30 and $40 suits. Had I bought them in the regular way, they would go into my $20 and $25 suits. I bought them at a price, and made them up into my famous $15.00 suits.

$25 Service Guaranteed Suits at $15

They are all wonders, but these will naturally have first call, as there is only a limited quantity of each pattern. Beautiful summer fabrics, in the newest and latest patterns, and are worth at least double the price I am charging. Don't blame me if you fail to get around in time. This offer actually means getting

Two Suits for the Price of One

My styles, tailoring, quality of workmanship and fabric are equal to the best made. Only my prices are different. I guarantee you a saving of one-third on every garment you buy from me from $10 up to $35. This is a good time to get acquainted.
